Well and Cheerful.
The Nation's Brain.
An Assembled Government.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WASHINGTON, June 4.

THE PRESIDENT yesterday looked unusually cheerful and his health has never been better. Perhaps a balanced budget contributes to his cheerfulness, perhaps the fact that representatives in Congress are anxious to get away and may go home.

THIS IS written under the dome of the Capitol, which may be called the nation's skull. Beneath it are the two lobes of the law-making brain, the Senate and House, and between them, the Supreme Court, representing after-thought, ready to correct mistakes.

Everybody has worried about balancing the budget. Millions are to be cut from salaries of public employes including thousands that get as little as twenty-five dollars a week. The Angel Gabriel will write down Hiram Johnson's fiery speech in defense of underpaid workers, asked to make good from life necessities, waste and extravagance for which they are not responsible.

THE NATION'S total debt today is seventeen and a half billions, more than fifteen times as much as when the war started.

That sounds serious until you realize that in good times the national income is ninety billions. If you had an income of ninety thousand a year and owed only seventeen thousand five hundred, you would consider yourself solvent.

Why must the government worry so much about the budget when it owes, all told, only one-sixth of one year's income?

MANY AMERICANS complain of Congress, belittle its ability. That is a mistake. There are brilliant men in both houses, abler than those that criticize without knowing.

The trouble is that your government is what automobile men call "unassembled job."

If you assembled parts from forty-eight different automobiles, you would not expect the machine to run well, even with all parts first class, individually.

Down hill it would run nicely, even with four wheels of different sizes. But up hill, with the difficulties of a rough road, it would travel poorly.

OUR CONGRESS is assembled from 48 states, each knowing on the average all about his own neighborhood, not so much about the 47 other neighborhoods. Florida does not know Oregon. Maine does not know Southern California. Kansas does not know the east side of Manhattan or the problems of New Mexico.

You are reminded of Samuel Johnson's statement that a woman preaching is like a dog walking on his hind legs. It is not that the dog does it well, but you wonder that he does it at all.

THERE ARE four hundred and thirty-five Congressmen in the House of Representatives—too many. One Congressman for forty thousand sounded reasonable when there were fewer than four million people in America. The maximum then would be one hundred Congressmen. Some say it should be whittled down to two hundred now, every state having at least two.

THE SENATE met early yesterday. Norris, of Nebraska, and Borah, of Idaho, sit side by side. You would not want two abler, more earnest, honest Americans than those, whether you agree with them in everything or not.

Many of the ablest men in America are in that body, also a few rather feeble.

SPEAKER GARNER sees newspapermen one hour before noon. The correspondents respect him. He needs no notes to answer questions. Mrs. Garner was in the speaker's room in the capitol at seven, after breakfasting at six. Does not that sound old-fashioned?

She has a boy thirty-six years old, who works hard. His father does not understand why the boy does not start his day at four, or at latest five in the morning. Mr. Garner always started at four. The indulgent mother protests that at five he would not find any businessmen to talk to. Seven is early enough for the younger generation. She does not suspect that seven a. m. is bedtime for many young moderns.

She misses her friends in Texas. It is so pleasant to go "just as you are," when asked to come over for supper. Or, when anybody knocks, while you are eating to say:

"Shove over, pull up a chair."

TODAY THE HOUSE will have a chance to push forward the Crosser bill which would make possible regular round trips to Europe, every week, by dirigible. No government help is asked, except a fair chance to carry the mails. New York's postmaster will testify that half the letters from New York would go, with extra postage for a two-day trip, if it were offered.

Such an enterprise, real trans-Atlantic travel and mail, would arouse enthusiasm and honor the nation. It can be done.

Much credit will be due the Representatives and Senators

East End Prowler Routed by Shot

TWO HOMES AND STORE LOOTED

Second Squirrel Hill Theft Attempt Foiled, Man Held; Thieves Get Cash, Gems

The second attempt within two days to rob Squirrel Hill homes was followed this morning by an exchange of revolver shots between a prowler and a special policeman and, later, by the arrest of a suspect.

Special Patrolman Robert Daily found a man attempting to jimmy a window in the home of J. G. Farquahar, 1545 Beechwood boulevard. The man fled, firing at Daily as he ran. Daily fired once but the prowler escaped.

A few hours later Patrolman Thomas Houlihan arrested Morris Krescher, 45, of Washington, D. C., who said he had been living at a downtown hotel, at Shady and Aylesboro avenue, not far from the home of Edward G. Hartje, Jr., 5622 Aylesboro avenue, from which a prowler was routed early yesterday.

Houlihan testified in East End Police Court today that he found two pocket flashlights and a pair of scissors in Kerscher's pockets and that a 32-caliber revolver was the ground nearby. Magistrate Charles Papale ordered the prisoner held for further investigation.

Last night two men entered the home of D. B. Smith, of Ingomar, held him up and took $35, some canned goods and a carpet sweeper.

'NOT GUILTY' PLEA MADE BY CURTIS

Trial of Lindy Hoaxer Set For June 27; Arraignment In Court Lasts 3 Minutes

FLEMINGTON, N. J., June 4.—(AP.)—John Hughes Curtis entered a plea of not guilty today to an indictment charging him with hindering capture of the kidnap-murderers of the Lindbergh baby.

Trial was set for June 27 as soon as the plea was entered.

Curtis, who pleaded not guilty despite his own confession to police, entered court dressed in a dark blue suit. He seemed entirely unconcerned and there was a faint smile on his face as he looked directly at the judge. He waived reading of the indictment and was remanded to jail in lieu of bail.

THANKS JUDGE

As soon as the brief proceedings were over, Curtis was told that he was remanded to jail to await trial. He nodded his head and said, speaking directly to the Judge:

"Thank you very much."

Although he did not otherwise show any emotion, Curtis' ruddy complexion paled slightly as he stood before the bar of justice.

But he seemed entirely composed as he walked out of the courtroom, past the judge's bench, on his way back to jail.

THREE-MINUTE ORDEAL

Curtis was in the courtroom less than three minutes.

The indictment, reading of which, as a preliminary to his plea, he waived, charged that he wilfully gave false information "for the purpose of preventing and hindering" arrest of the kidnaping.

It recited that he perpetrated his hoax of imaginary negotiations for return of the murdered baby "with force and arms." This was understood, however, to be merely customary legal phraseology and not to indicate any belief that Curtis had actually carried out his hoax by physical force and threats, rather than by deceipt.

W. R. Hearst Denounces Shotgun Taxation Methods of Congress

Following is the text of the address on "Painful and Painless Taxation" made by William Randolph Hearst last night over a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company. Mr. Hearst spoke from station KFI at Los Angeles.

Painful and Painless Taxation

MY FRIENDS, Congress is about to pass its tax bill, and a very iniquitous one. The results of this bill will be a great lesson to Congress and the country in the year to come, but doubtless the lesson will do us good if we survive it.

The situation is a little like the case of the gentleman who was being hanged and who said just before the trap was sprung:

"This is going to be a great lesson to me."

It was.

Well, the tax is going to be the same kind of a lesson to us.

Of course the government has to have some kind of additional revenue. The cost of government has increased from one billion dollars a year in 1913 to five billion dollars a year in 1931, and the only important economies which Congress can think of are destroying our national defense and demoralizing our national defenders.

SO THE QUESTION then is not whether we shall pay additional taxes, but what kind of additional taxes, we shall pay?

We cannot profitably increase tariff taxation.

Why? Because tariff taxation is now so high that it is very largely excluding foreign goods from the country; and the government gets tax returns from goods which come into the country, not from goods which do not come in.

Therefore, higher tariff rates would probably exclude more goods and bring less returns instead of more.

We cannot get the benefit of the thousand million dollars per year the government might get from sumptuary excise taxation.

Why? Because the good people of the country who adopted the policy of prohibition in the hope that it would prove a temperance and generally moral measure, are not yet convinced that it is unhappily an intemperance and immoral measure.

WHEN THESE GOOD people are convinced, we will have the sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages regulated by the government, as in Canada, with an income therefrom of a thousand million dollars a year.

But these good people may not be convinced for some years yet, and in the meantime we will have to get along with the crime and drunkenness and corruption, and WITHOUT the income.

"But we CAN increase the income taxes," say you.

We can, but President Wilson, the great Democratic leader, has warned against too high income taxes, and President Coolidge, the great Republican leader, has warned against too high income taxes, and Secretary Mellon, one of our greatest secretaries of the Treasury, has warned against them, and all financial authorities warn us.

WHY DO THEY warn us?

Because high income taxes too radically reduce incomes, and reduced incomes mean less spending, and less spending means less prosperity.

Business is merely a matter of buying and selling, and naturally the less buying there is the less business there is, and the fewer people there are employed in selling and in producing goods to sell.

The market crash of 1929 and the consequent depression have already heavily reduced incomes and made buying less, and business bad; and if we further heavily reduce incomes, we will merely make buying still less and business still worse.

Moreover, there is a strong probability that increased income taxation will not mean increased revenue to the government.

Why? Because confiscatory income taxes will

OHIO GUARD HELD READY FOR CALL IN CRISIS

BULLETIN.

CLEVELAND, O., June 4.—(AP.)—Police and about 100 bonus marchers clashed in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards today when the veterans made a futile attempt to storm the roundhouse to obtain transportation to Washington. One of the marchers was beaten into unconsciousness and several others fell before a charge by mounted police officers, swinging riot clubs from the saddle.

Developments in the veterans' march to Washington to demand full payment of the bonus today were these:

1—Cleveland police clear Pennsylvania Railroad yards of 900 "bonus marchers," who had stopped operations of trains. Railroad officials ask aid of state troops.

2—Labeling the Workers' Ex-Service Men's League as having "Red" affiliations, Police Chief Peter F. Walsh, of Pittsburgh, says its marchers will not be permitted to stop in Pittsburgh.

3—Bonus marchers face foodless and shelterless stay in national capital as police heads announce that provisions and money stores are nearing exhaustion.

CLEVELAND, June 4.—(AP.)—A battalion of bonus marchers who had tied up all freight train movements in the Pennsylvania Railroad's yards here capitulated before a massed force of police and withdrew to a nearby field today.

HAUSNER PLANE UNSIGHTED

LONDON, June 4.—(INS.)—Stanislaus F. Hausner, little-experienced Polish-American pilot, expected over England on a solo flight from New York to Warsaw, Poland, was unreported here today.

The air ministry, Croydon aerodrome, and steamship and radio communication companies had no news of the determined Hausner, who set out in the face of severely adverse weather conditions.

Hausner, who set out at 9:45 a. m., New York time, yesterday, was expected over England some time between noon and 5 p. m. (between 7 a. m. and noon, E. D. T.)

SEABURY TAKES UP CHALLENGE

Former Judge Samuel Seabury, accepting Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's challenge to produce before him the evidence against Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, denied in Pittsburgh yesterday that he was actuated by political motives. Critics have contended that he secretly sought a presidential nomination.

When he reached Pittsburgh, tired after a drive from New York, this question was put to him:

"Judge, your Tammany Hall critics in New York claim that your investigation is nothing but politics. Do you have political ambitions?"

"I've sown my political wild oats,"

Seabury goes to Washington, Pa., today to receive an honorary degree of doctor of laws and ad-College graduates.

dress Washington and Jefferson

When he reached the Hotel Schenley late yesterday Seabury was shown the Roosevelt statement. He commented:

"I will be in my office Monday morning. I will see to it that a transcript of the record and an analysis of the testimony concerning Mayor Walker reaches the Governor as early as next week as is possible."

Victim of Poison Dies in Hospital

Mrs. Lorena Raymond, 40, of 65 Pasadena street, died in the Allegheny General Hospital early today of poison tablets taken in an alleged suicidal attempt in a downtown department store last Tuesday.

John L. Hernon's Daughter, 11, Dies

Mercedes Florence Hernon, 11, daughter of John L. Hernon, boxing promoter and member of the Allegheny County Elections Bureau, is dead today at her home in Aspinwall, a victim of blood poisoning. She had recovered from an attack of scarlet fever when an infection developed on Wednesday and she was rushed to St. Margaret's Hospital, where she died last night.

Volpe, Two Aides Denied New Trial

Louis Volpe and two of his associates, William Wallace and Alfredo Corleto, of Wilmerding, convicted May 17 of violating the prohibition laws, were denied a new trial by Judge R. M. Gibson in Federal Court today. They will be notified next week when to appear for sentence. All are at liberty on bail.

BELGRADE, June 4.—(AP.)—A bolt of lightning struck a group of football players during a game in City Square yesterday. One was killed and another injured.

Mount of King's Son Perils Monarch, Wales at Fete

By CHARLES A. SMITH

LONDON, June 4.—(INS.)—The historic ceremony of trooping the color, carried out each year in honor of King George's birthday, was marred today by the restiveness of a black charger ridden by the Duke of Gloucester, the monarch's third son.

While massed bands were blaring martial music in the horse guards' parade, the duke's mount suddenly got out of control. Its flying hoofs endangered the king and the Prince of Wales, who was mounted near his father.

Three times the King and his eldest son were compelled to withdraw out of the range of the troublesome animal. The Duke rode off the parade grounds twice to quiet the horse while the ceremony was in progress and finally succeeded in subduing it with assistance of the Prince of Wales.

NEW TAX FIGHT IN SENATE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—With the House poised to approve the $1,119,000,000 "tax bill that nobody likes" today, fresh opposition in the Senate presaged delay in final passage.

The measure was to be called up in the House by Acting Chairman Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, of the Ways and Means Committee, with a plan for speedy action to strengthen confidence in the government's financial stability.

Every day's delay costs the government money, since special levies are effective 15 days after passage. Senate leaders saw little chance for action in that body before Tuesday. Charges of bad faith were hurled at the ten Senate-House conferees by Senator Howell (Rep.), of Nebraska, because they placed the 3 per cent tax on electricity on the consumers. The Senate had adopted the Howell amendment to place it upon power companies.

Congress War Goes To Baseball Field

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP.)—First blood is drawn today in the great quadrennial battle between Republicans and Democrats, but this preliminary skirmish is on the baseball diamond.

With Gene Tunney announced as principal umpire, with vociferous spokesmen selected to argue his decisions, House members of the two parties were to meet this afternoon in Griffith Stadium to see which one can sock the hardest, put most stuff on the ball, and slide home first and safe.

MINE STRIKERS TO MARCH

Coverdale miners, members of Local 5085, United Mine Workers of America, who voted against accepting a 10 per cent wage cut ordered by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, today joined with miners from Mollenauer, Castle Shannon, Horning and Avella in a demonstration at Coverdale.

Plans for a parade to Castle Shannon were called off. At today's meeting plans for relief among the miners were to be formulated, David McCracken, president of the local, said.

Following last night's meeting when the men refused to accept the cut, a meeting was held by adherents of the National Miners' Union and a challenge issued to P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, to debate with Frank Borish, secretary of the National Miners' Union.

BONUS MARCHERS CAPITULATE AFTER BLOCKADING TRAINS

POLICE MASSED IN CLEVELAND EMERGENCY

mounted policemen and motorcycle men assembled. Chief of Police George Matowitz ordered the ex-service men to leave the yard. They did so without any disturbance.

SURROUND LOCOMOTIVE

A short time previously, an attempt to bring a locomotive into service with Chief Matowitz among those aboard, failed when the veterans surrounded the engine and draped it with their American flags.

The display of police came a few hours after officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, routed Col. George White from bed with a request for state militia. But Adj. Gen. Frank D. Henderson said local authorities were able to cope with the situation.

The veterans stalemated all their march to Washington when the railroad refused them transportation last night, promptly took charge of the Pennsylvania and forced shopmen to take the evening off and announced no more eastbound freight trains would leave without them. The railroad held three trains scheduled to leave for Pittsburgh in the yards.

MARCH TO YARDS

The trouble began last night when the veterans refused in Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland marched to the yards, thinking they would obtain a freight train to Pittsburgh. When three freights were held in the yard, however, the ex-service men forced shopmen to quit work, seized one switch engine and were quoted by dispatchers as declaring no more freights would be allowed to leave without them.

Some of the service men climbed aboard the engine of the Pittsburgh mail train as it was slowly moving through the yards and compelled the engineer to stop.

At first they insisted upon riding eastward, but after lengthy bickering consented to let the train proceed since it carried mail. The train also had two Pullman coaches in which there were 25 passengers, but none of the passengers was disturbed.

Walsh Won't Permit Marchers to Stop Here

Three hundred Pittsburgh patrolmen, mostly World War veterans, were being held in readiness here to repel an invasion of bonus marchers under the banner of the Workers Ex-Service Men's League, a reputed Communistic organization with headquarters in New York.

Mobilized under direct orders of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh the city police squads will meet incoming contingents of the Ex-Service Men's League on their bonus march to Washington with orders to:

"Keep moving."

Walsh declared there is no room in the city for "Reds."

He said:

"If these men are sponsored by the American Legion or the Veterans of Foreign Wars or any other patriotic organization, we will do all in our power to assist them on their way, but if they are 'Reds,' they will be given orders to keep going.

"We're not going to tolerate any of that Communistic stuff here and if they don't keep right on going through Pittsburgh, we'll let them spend a while in our jails."

NO ROOM FOR REDS

Attorney Harry I. Miller, head of the Helping Hand, to whom an appeal was carried for overnight lodging and food on behalf of the Cleveland delegation of bonus seekers by representatives of the Ex-Service Men's League, was just as emphatic. He said:

"As long as these veterans come here under the sponsorship of recognized patriotic organizations, we will take care of them. We will feed them and give them a night's lodging, but we have no room for Reds."

The local branch of the Ex-Service Men's League, headed by C. L. Constantine, official of the International Labor Defense, a recognized Communistic organization, appealed to the Helping Hand yesterday after fruitless requests to County Commissioners and Supt. Walsh. Constantine met with his committee at the Labor Defense headquarters, second floor, 706 Fifth avenue, and formulated plans for organizing 800 war veterans here to join the main body of the group coming from Cleveland. He declared:

"Our organization is not Communistic. We are all war veterans and all we want is what's coming to us in back wages. We are going to meet the Cleveland marchers Sunday afternoon in West Park, North Side, and we will continue the march to Washington Monday morning. We expect at least 1,000 veterans in the Cleveland march."

MOBILIZE HERE

Meanwhile, two other "armies" of veterans mobilized here. From the Strip district it was reported that at least 100 marchers would be ready Monday morning. They are organizing under the leadership of James J. McGrath.

At Homestead between 75 and 100 ex-soldiers were planning to go to Washington under the leadership of William Stretton and James Crowley. Neither the Homestead group nor the Strip group has any affiliation with the Ex-Service Men's League.

Still another group was organizing at Duquesne.

From Southeastern Ohio and the Panhandle section of West Virginia another large group was reported mobilizing. This group, according to reports, planned to join the Ex-Service Men's League march from Pittsburgh.

John Pace, heading the Detroit delegation of bonus marchers to Washington, will get some news if he arrives in Pittsburgh late today as expected. City Detectives received a telegram from the Workers Ex-Service Men's League of Detroit asking them to notify Pace on his arrival here that his wife had given birth to a baby boy. Mother and child are doing well, the telegram stated.

Veterans Face Foodless, Shelterless Stay in Capitol

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP)—Thousands of veterans on their way to Washington to demand payment of the bonus face a foodless, shelterless stay in the capital.

Only a few dollars and a limited amount of supplies remain of the stores gathered by the Police Department to care for the jobless visitors and Police Supt. Glassford has announced he will gather no more. The one to two thousand men already here, many of them now sleeping in the open, will soon be out of food at the present rate, even without arrival of the 5,400 reported en route on freight trains, trucks and afoot.

Presence of the veterans, however, was helping to get signatures on the petition which will compel a vote in the House on the $2,000,000,000 bonus-paying Patman bill. When the House convened this morning, 132 of the necessary 145 signatures were on the dotted line and there was not much doubt that the remainder needed would be obtained before adjournment.

Monday, June 13, is the day the vote would be had. That is one day before the Republican national convention opens. Congress may be in session then, and it may not.

HEAT TO STAY; CLAIMS 1 LIFE

No relief from the heat wave which yesterday claimed the life of one man was in sight today, Meteorologist W. S. Broizman said. The mercury yesterday soared to 86 degrees.

The first victim of the heat, John W. Langfitt, 50, of 1376 Pocono street, Swissvale, a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad clerk, fell dead in the office of Dr. C. S. Cain, 13 Grant avenue, Etna, according to the Coroner's report. Langfitt, who was receiving treatment, collapsed shortly after he had complained about the hot weather.

Showers, predicted for today, were expected to bring no relief from the high temperature.

MINORITY CHIEF RAPS PINCHOT

HARRISBURG, June 4.—(AP)—Wilson G. Sarig, minority leader in the House of Representatives, today charged Gov. Pinchot is resorting to "school-boy methods" to justify "adding more than 800 new employes on the state payroll."

He bases his charge, he says, on the Governor's declaration "that while the increase in state employment costs under his administration has been 4.8 per cent, the increase in state employment costs under Gen. Edward Martin's Treasury Department has been 15 per cent."

The Governor's reply, Sarig adds, liberally translated, means, "I have been a bad boy, but Ed has been still worse."

Ex-Army Captain Faces Check Quiz

Glenn Oppy, 37, of 823 Centennial avenue, Sewickley, who says he is a retired Army captain, was remanded to jail for five days by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today while detectives investigate alleged check-passing activities. Oppy admitted this, but said he expected his service check to arrive in time to cover them.

Mackrell to Talk At 'Army' Meeting

The Salvation Army will hold a mass meeting in Riverview Memorial Park tomorrow afternoon in conjunction with the Home Service Fund appeal which will open in 10 Allegheny Valley towns Monday and continue through June 16. Speakers include Joseph N. Mackrell, Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, the Rev. Dr. George E. Davies, of the National Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, and Lieut. Col. C. B. Campbell, of the Salvation Army here.

HOUSE, SENATE GROUPS UNITE FOR U. S. AID

Democrats Demand Hoover Drop Opposition to Public Works Bond Issue Program

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP)—The administration's relief bill, sponsored by Secretary Mills, of the Treasury, was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Barbour (Rep.), of New Jersey.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Democratic leaders of the Senate and House today united in a fight for adoption of a huge public works program to create jobs for the unemployed.

Spurning the administration plan to divide jobless relief legislation and rush through a resolution to provide loans for states, the Democrats demanded that President Hoover recede from his opposition to a public works bond issue.

SLATED FOR PASSAGE

The $2,300,000,000 relief program of Speaker John N. Garner, of the House, was slated for passage in that body by Tuesday, after Democrats had invoked the caucus rule to assure speedy action.

In the Senate, Democratic leaders in relief legislation pressed for a vote on the Robinson-Wagner $2,300,000,000 plan immediately after the economy and tax bills are disposed of next week.

The administration's effort to obtain early passage of a separate resolution authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan $300,000,000 to states, who in turn could loan to cities, was rejected by Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York, after conferences between administration and Democratic leaders.

BANKERS SPUR HOOVER

The appeal to divorce statewide relief from the bond issue plan was made after Chicago bankers telephoned President Hoover that federal aid is imperative if jobless relief is to be continued. Senator Lewis (Dem.), of Illinois, introduced a resolution giving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation unlimited power to make state loans.

Other Senate Democrats, however, saw in the move a plan to block a public works program as a part of unemployment relief. Senator Wagner and others demanded that Mr. Hoover give approval to the $500,000,000 bond issue provided in the Robinson-Wagner plan.

Norris Perjury Case Jury Fails to Agree

LINCOLN, Neb., June 4.—(AP)—A Federal Court jury was unable to agree on the perjury charge against Victor E. Seymour, former Republican leader, and was discharged last night after nearly 30 hours' deliberation.

The charge grew out of Seymour's testimony before a senatorial committee during the investigation of the attempt of George W. Norris, a grocer, in 1930, to oppose United States Senator George W. Norris in the primary election.

Jessel Plans Second Divorce From Actress

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—George Jessel, stage comedian, returned on the Leviathan from Europe with the announced intention of obtaining a divorce from his wife, the former Florence Courtney, musical comedy actress. He divorced her once before and re-married her in 1923.

He refused to honor the rumor he would marry Norma Talmadge, but said they might play together in a picture to be produced in England in several weeks.

ACT TO OBTAIN STATE RELIEF

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Replying to a protest from Gov. Gifford Pinchot that the pending Wagner public works bill is so worded as to prevent loans to Pennsylvania for state projects, Senator James J. Davis has asked the Governor to call on the Attorney General of the state to study the bill and prepare an amendment to correct the objectionable provisions.

The pending public works bill, offered by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, authorizes an appropriation of $1,460,000,000 as a federal loan fund to the various states for financing state projects.

Gov. Pinchot, in a telegram to Senator Davis, said that the commonwealth of Pennsylvania could not participate in the loan under certain sections of the measure.

Woodside to Extend Audit of Squires

County Controller Robert G. Woodside has announced that a more complete audit of the records of squires will be made as soon as he has sufficient county auditors free to take up the work.

Recently, it has been the custom to audit the records of four or five squires selected at random. Squires are required to file quarterly reports and these have been produced regularly since 1928.

Mr. Hoppe, a tile salesman, lived at 117 West Marlin drive, Mt. Lebanon. Relatives here said the interment would be in Bayonne. He leaves his wife, Anne Abrams Hoppe, and a son, Richard.

SUMMON RYAN FOR QUIZ ON STOCK DEALS

Senate Probe Calls Copper Magnate to Explain Huge Transactions in Anaconda

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The strange manipulation of Anaconda copper stock before the market crash of 1929, in which the great National City Company of New York, participated, was subjected anew today to an inquisitorial spotlight at the Senate's inquiry into speculation.

John D. Ryan, chairman of the board of Anaconda, was summoned to clear up some of the mysteries about the deals in that stock, which cost the American public anywhere from $37,000,000 to $157,000,000. Even the big speculators of Wall street suffered enormous losses, one huge pool taking a $7,000,000 loss.

RASKOB QUESTIONED

The Anaconda inquiry followed the appearance of John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman. Democratic spokesmen claimed Raskob was called so he could be "shown up" as a gambler, but that he had scored a victory over the investigating committee.

The inquiry into Raskob's market operations was hampered throughout by Senators Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, and Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, who frequently interrupted the proceedings.

It was brought out that Raskob, while a director in General Motors, played the market both long and short in that stock. William A. Gray, the committee's attorney, called it a typical example of a director speculating in the stock of his own company.

GLASS BLOCKS QUIZ

On another occasion, Raskob denounced some of the practices revealed at previous hearings of the committee. He was asked whether he referred to the Radio pool in which he participated in 1929. He replied he invested $4,000,000 in Radio, sold it around 40, although it later went to 525. At that point Glass prevented Gray from bringing out that Raskob took a $291,000 profit out of the 1929 pool which cost the American public almost $10,000,000 in 10 days.

Ryan was called to determine just how much profit was made by the Anaconda "selling campaign." The stock, incidentally, was unloaded on the public at from $120 to $135 a share. It sells today for $4, with the public "holding the bag."

Dismissed Sheriff Lands $50,000 Job

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—The Times says former Sheriff Thomas M. Farley, ousted by Gov. Roosevelt on charges preferred by Samuel Seabury, has been chosen "czar" of the cleaning and dyeing industry in New York City at a salary of $50,000 a year.

Farley, a leading member of Tammany Hall, will open his office Monday as head of the Metropolitan Trade Association of Master Cleaners and Dyers, with the intention of cleaning up what its members call a "racket-infested industry."

State Gas Revenues Show $155,932 Gain

HARRISBURG, June 4.—(AP)—Dr. Clyde L. King, Secretary of Revenue, announced that $32,855,550 had been collected in gasoline taxes during the fiscal year ended May 31.

This amount is $155,932 greater than that collected in the preceding fiscal year. Gallonage taxed this year was 1,108,765,824, as compared with 1,018,949,519 in 1931.

Willard Sees End Of Downturn Soon

BALTIMORE, June 4.—(AP)—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, said today he believed "we might expect an early and helpful decision from Congress" on balancing the budget and this would stop the "downward tendency."

The business recovery, however, he said will be slow.

that make the America-to-Europe air lines possible.

ALL WASHINGTON talks of the convention. The President is as good as renominated now, so the talk is about the Democrats:

"Can anybody stop Roosevelt? Can he win if nominated?"

"You cannot stop somebody with nobody."

And to that Mr. Williams adds:

"And you cannot stop somebody with everybody. You need some one man to do the stopping."

However, there are able politicians determined to do the stopping, and many of them agree that if Roosevelt is stopped, in spite of his more than six hundred votes, Speaker Garner will be the man chosen.

AN EFFORT is made to reduce federal judges' salaries and some members of Congress seek to force that step on the judges. The saving would amount to nothing, only fifty-six thousand dollars a year, if ten per cent were cut from every judge.

Our federal judges are miserably underpaid compared with British judges. They should not be bullied or coerced into accepting a reduction in their salaries, since it would mean allowing the legislative branch to control the judiciary, in defiance of the Constitution.

HINT HINDENBURG TO QUIT IN FAVOR OF EX-CROWN PRINCE

REICHSTAG OUT, NEW LEADERS DEFY WORLD

Political Editor Reports Plan to Place Kaiser's Son at Head of Nation

BERLIN, June 4—(AP.)—A prominent German Nationalist source predicted today that President Paul von Hindenburg would retire on his eighty fifth birthday, October 2, and urge the election of former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm von Hohenzollern as his successor.

The source of the prediction was one of the most influential politicians in the German Nationalist party, the editor of the most important of the newspapers of Alfred Hugenberg, Nationalist head and recently a candidate for President against Von Hindenburg.

The move, if it developed successfully, would again put the house of Hohenzollern at the head of the German government.

Official circles denied, however, that any such plan was in President von Hindenburg's mind.

CABINET CHANGE SEEN

The Centrist daily Der Deutsche said, on the other hand, that Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, Minister of Defense in the new cabinet, met in his home recently with Adolf Hitler, National Socialist chieftain, and the former crown prince and the three agreed that after the Reichstag elections the cabinet would be changed slightly to include several members of Hitler's party.

Gen. Von Schleicher would continue the dominating force, however, the newspaper said it was agreed.

It said the Nazis were to be given the controlling influence in Prussia in return for support of Von Schleicher's regime in the Reich as a whole.

It was also learned from a reliable source that the steel helmet organization is ready to supply one of its leaders as minister of defense in case Schleicher should become chancellor after the Reichstag elections.

Reichstag Dissolved, Equality Fight Begins

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, June 4—Assuming dictatorial powers by virtue of President von Hindenburg's dissolution of the Reichstag, the German government served notice today that henceforth the world must expect a new, regenerated Germany freed from the shackles imposed by the World War.

In a vigorously worded platform declaration, the cabinet headed by Chancellor Franz von Papen branded Germany's democracy of the last 13 years as a failure, attacked Bolshevism as a "corroding poison" and announced that so far as reparations and armaments are concerned, Germany will demand equality with the rest of the world.

Using phraseology similar to the impassioned outburst of Adolf Hitler in his demands for a "new Germany," the statement charged that the treaty of Versailles had struck the German people down and that the social democracy of the last 13 years had brought about "moral degeneration" and turned the state into a charity institution.

Monessen Economy Program Ignored

MONESSEN, Pa., June 4—Orders from the Department of Public Safety here to turn off 31 street lights were ignored by the West Penn Power Company. It is planned to save $4,000 a year by alternating lights on two main streets here, with one off and one on.

The power company claims the contract existing does not provide for such service.

HERRIOT FILLS NEW CABINET

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

PARIS, June 4—A moderate cabinet, with 13 of 18 posts filled by members of his Radical Socialist party, was completed today by Premier Edouard Herriot.

Herriot chose to keep the foreign portfolio for himself. He installed Joseph Paul-Boncour as Minister of War, and George Leygues as Minister of the Navy.

The Socialists, second strongest group in the Chamber, were excluded from the cabinet as a result of their refusal to join the government unless drastic demands were met.

The new government was expected to appear before the Chamber with its declaration of policy next Tuesday or Wednesday. It was probable it would be given a strong majority at least until after the Lausanne conference in order to give the French delegation a firm backing. After Lausanne, however, it appeared majorities would be slim on many issues.

Elks to Pick Wife For Man at Picnic

HOLLISTER, Cal., June 4—(Universal)—Although he filed notice today on intention to marry seven women, 58-year-old James Dale, of Petaluma, where most of the inhabitants are chicken fanciers, isn't going to be a bigamist in a big way.

Dale explained to the county clerk that Sunday, at a picnic near here, there will be a "courtship review" and his brother Elks will decide which of the seven he will marry by giving her the most applause.

Massie Assigned To Duty at Sea

WASHINGTON, June 4—(AP.)—Orders for Lieut. Thomas H. Massie were changed again yesterday by the Navy Department, and on June 23 the young officer who figured in Honolulu's honor slaying case will begin a tour of sea duty instead of reporting at San Francisco.

He received instructions personally to board the battleship New Mexico, now at the Philadelphia Navy Yard being modernized. Until time to report, he will remain on leave.

New Kensington Man Held by Coroner

Charles Peters, 13 Fourth avenue, New Kensington, today is being held on a manslaughter charge by the coroner, following an inquest into the death of Leroy McCreery, 38, 406 River avenue. BOAT UPSETS, FIVE DROWNED

ROCKPORT, Ind., June 4 (AP.)—The Ohio River's worst tragedy of the year so far had claimed five lives today. A motorboat carrying four adults and four children capsized near here last night and only three occupants survived.

Those who drowned were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lynn and their 10-year-old son, Charles, and Mrs. Louis Parsley and her 5-year-old daughter, Bonnie Jean. All lived at Rockport. Parsley managed to swim ashore, but was unable to aid in rescue efforts. A fisherman saved the two other children.

DETROIT, June 4—(AP.)—A grandmother and two of her grandsons, all unable to swim, were drowned in the Detroit River near the police boathouse on Belle Isle last night. Their bodies were recovered.

The victims, Mrs. Hattie Hannan, 52; Wilbur Herring, 8, and his brother Conrad, 9, were picnicing. Wilbur, paddling on a log in the stream, lost his grip and Conrad plunged in after him. Mrs. Hannan following.

Man Shoots Girl Art Student, Kills Self

CHICAGO, June 4 (AP.)—A rejected suitor intruded on an art exhibition last night, shot and seriously wounded Miss Dorothy B. Smith, 21-year-old art student, and killed himself.

The young woman was showing a painting she had created to some of her friends when Theodore Caldwell, 26, a former university student, called her away and shot her and himself. On the way to the hospital Miss Smith told police the shooting resulted from "one of those crazy love affairs."

Physicians said she may live.

Zoning Board Nulls Dog Hospital Permit

The Zoning Board late yesterday announced it had authorized revocation of a permit to Dr. Samuel Glen for a modern dog and cat hospital at 5432 Center avenue. The revocation was on petition of the First Evangelical Church, Center avenue and South Graham street, which contended the hospital would be a nuisance.

Dr. Glenn had been granted a permit by the Bureau of Building Inspection.

Passing Lights Main Traffic Offense

Failure to obey stop-and-go lights was the major traffic law violation reported by the traffic safety observers of Pittsburgh during May, according to an analysis of reports made public today by Walter Rosenbaum, education section chairman of the Better Traffic Committee. Ninety-one violations of this type were witnessed.

Passing street cars on the left ranked as the second most frequent violation, with 83 reports. Other leading violations were weaving driving, 81; wrong side of street, 67, and too fast for safety, 47.

QUAKE KILLS 60 IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, June 4—(AP.)—More than three score persons were known dead today and upwards of 100 injured as a result of the series of destructive earthquake shocks which struck Mexico yesterday.

Great damage was done over a wide area and a number of smaller towns were entirely wiped out. Delayed official dispatches from Guadalajara raised the death toll in that vicinity to at least 30. A score of towns were seriously damaged or destroyed.

The towns of Atenguillo and San Gabriel in the Guadalajara district were wiped out.

Ciudad Guzman was almost demolished and the town of Esperanza was badly damaged. Other towns badly damaged were: Ameca, Mascota, Autlan, Tatlanh, Sayula and Tlajomulco.

EVIDENCE GIVEN IN 'HYMIE' CASE

CLEVELAND, June 4—(AP.)—Taking of evidence on the retrial of Pittsburgh Hymie Martin for the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter began today.

Dead men tell no tales, the jury of eight women and four men were told yesterday by state's attorneys who asserted this was the reason for the murder of Potter.

In asking the death penalty for Martin, Assistant County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan declared the defendant was a party in the conspiracy to slay Potter to prevent the latter from injuring others by "talking."

Defense Attorney William E. Marshall attacked Fred C. Laub, chief state witness and custodian of the apartment in which Potter met his death. Marshall referred to Laub as a "liar" and a "hired witness," adding that "Martin was framed by police."

THIRTY PERILED IN BOMBING

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 4—Thrown from their beds by the force of a blast which early today destroyed a 12-room double house in Masontown, 30 persons had narrow escapes from serious injury. Windows within a radius of a block were shattered. The building was immediately burning embers were blown against the home of Fred Stacey, 20 feet distant, and set it on fire. Damage of more than $1,000 to the Stacey home was caused.

Five members of the Stacey family, who resided nearest the scene of the blast, were forced from their beds and bruised. Parts of the double home were scattered for several blocks.

Ed Johnson and his family had just vacated one side of the building which was owned by Anthony Tumila of Scranton. It was evident that a bomb had been placed in the center of the building.

Wife Slayer Killed By Police in Siege

VINELAND, N. J., June 4 (AP.)—A 37-year-old grocer fatally wounded his young wife today, stood off police with a shotgun in her barricaded bedroom and was shot to death after an hours battle. The man, John B. Tamanini, made a futile attempt to shoot his 10-year-old son, Morris.

The wife, Emily, 28, died to death before reaching a hospital. Neighbors told police Tamanini, a World War veteran, had been jealous of attention paid her by other men.

COUNTY INQUIRY NEARS GRAND JURY STAGE

Park, Aide Scan Stories of Employes; Supplies Given As Favors for Votes Bared

Statements by present and former county employes as to the misuse of county labor and supplies were being examined today by District Attorney Andrew T. Park and his assistant, Earl T. Adair, seeking to determine how much of the testimony could be brought to the attention of a grand jury. The District Attorney stepped into the investigation when he assigned Adair to cooperate with Assistant County Solicitor Ralph Frank in examining witnesses.

And while Adair was going over the lengthy statements, Leo G. Riordan, head of the County Bureau of Investigation, was interviewing more than a dozen residents of Ohio Township regarding favors received from a former county warehouse worker in the way of cinders, roads, fences, shrubbery and the like. The county supplies were given away by a storekeeper in the warehouse on the Camp Horne road near Emsworth in return for help at election time, the probers have been told.

A county policeman stationed at the Liberty tubes, who is said to have had a cement walk built from the roadway to his door, also was under investigation. The policeman, a witness said, resides near the end of the Saw Mill Run boulevard. Witnesses told also of working on the private properties of Edward Kenna, Roy Walters and Joseph Lorenzo.

HELD THREE JOBS

The principal witness yesterday was Kenneth O. Graves, landscape architect, who admitted he came to Pittsburgh from Chicago and was hired by the county to lay out golf courses after he, on instructions of Paul B. Riis, director of parks, pretended he had done work in this state and was a resident of Pittsburgh. Letters from Riis to Graves were read into records.

Graves said a man named Dentus, recreation director in South Park in 1928, taught athletics in a city high school and later was made park custodian, receiving two pay checks from the county and one from the Board of Education.

FAULTY WORK CHARGED

Assistant County Solicitor Churchill B. Mehard took charge of the questioning in the afternoon and drew from a former park plumber a story of a faulty water system at the South Park swimming pool.

A contractor had installed water lines which broke when tested. The contractor, the witness said, was permitted to quit the job without making repairs and the day after he left it was testified, Riis ordered plumbers and laborers to dig up and repair the lines. Similar repairs had to be made on lines laid under the golf course, the witness said.

Woman Writer Sues Over Father's Will

ST. LOUIS, June 4—(AP.)—Mrs. Rose G. Winslow, of New York City, a novelist whose pen name is "Jane Burr," filed suit in Circuit Court here yesterday seeking to set aside the will of her father, Leopold M. Guggenheim, capitalist, who left an estate estimated to value $1,000,000. He died last September.

The will provided Mrs. Winslow with a monthly income of $200. She charged that the elder Guggenheim was unduly influenced by his son Dr. Louis K. Guggenheim, and Mrs. Selma Mayer, another daughter.

Tube Ventilation Changes Sought After Gas Tests

Changes in the ventilating system of the Liberty Tubes will be recommended to County Commissioners as a result of a conference late yesterday of the carbon monoxide survey committee of the office of Dr. C. B. Maits, city physician. The recommendations will be the result of a six-week survey of carbon monoxide condition in the tubes.

The survey was made in connection with members of the United States Bureau of Mines, the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research and the University of Pittsburgh.

It was pointed out that no immediate danger was indicated, but Dr. Maits and spokesmen for the several groups declined to make public the text of their report.

It was said that during rush hours more carbon monoxide gas than is "desirable" was found in sections of the tubes, but not in dangerous volume, except possibly in the event of a prolonged tieup. The investigators expressed the belief the condition could be overcome by changing the speed of ventilating fans and making certain other changes.

Middies Rush to Altar As Bars Are Lifted

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 4—(AP.)—Romance had its inning at the Naval Academy yesterday. The weddings of love-stricken graduates, delayed by official orders for 24 hours, were held in the college chapel.

JEWS TO MARK SHABUOTH ON THURSDAY

Feast of Weeks, Sometimes Called Pentecost; Day Young Enter Synagogue

At sundown Thursday Pittsburgh Jewry will join in the world observance of Shabuoth, the feast of weeks. Shabuoth is sometimes called pentecost, or the feast of early harvest.

It is called pentecost because it occurs 50 days after the beginning of the passover holiday, or seven weeks after the counting of the omer, or measure of barley.

Mindful of Israel's acceptance of the torah, the young on this day will take their places in the synagogue to pronounce their allegiance to Judaism in the ceremony of confirmation.

The Book of Ruth is read in the house of worship. The narrative is appropriate for Shabuoth because of its setting in the harvest fields and because of its universalistic teachings.

Delegation to C. E. Convention Planned

Christian Endeavor societies of Allegheny County will send delegates to the fifteenth annual convention of the organization, July 11 to 15, in Conneaut Lake Park.

T. S. Yates, president of the county union, has arranged as speakers Drs. D. A. Poling, William H. Foulkes, Louis Evans, Harry N. Holmes and S. Wilmer Bettler. The 300-piece band of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will be present during the convention and Homer Rodeheaver will direct the singing.

Speaker

DR. JOHN WILLIAMSON

Dr. Williamson, Cornell University, director of the Westminster Choir, speaker tomorrow morning in Homestead's First Presbyterian Church, director of the combining chorus choirs singing tomorrow afternoon at the Pitt Stadium.

Police Continue Search for Body

Cleveland police today were continuing a search for the body of Mrs. Patrick Casey, daughter of Mrs. Amelia Kiray, 2328 Primrose street, South Side, drowned in Lake Erie Sunday when she attempted to save a companion who had fallen from a small boat in which they were riding. Mrs. Casey went to the Ohio city two years ago.

PASTOR TO ASK FOR WEEK OF PRAYER

The Rev. Bleakney to Urge Protestant Join Catholic In Relief Supplications

A plea for Protestants to join with Catholics in prayer for the relief of the world's economic situation, as requested by Pope Pius XI, in a recent encyclical, will be made tomorrow morning by the Rev. Edward Bleakney, in the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church.

Commenting on his sermon subject, "Let the Protestants Pray With the Catholics as the Pope Suggests," the Rev. Bleakney said:

"I am heartily in favor of the request made by the Pope that all Catholics pray for surcease from our economic troubles. He is a man of broad intellect, and has shown that he is aligned with the group which believes that the church should join in an attempt to rid the world of selfishness and lust for gold."

The Rev. Bleakney will suggest that the members of his congregation conduct a week of prayer as suggested by the Pope and to join with members of the Catholic faith in supplication for relief from suffering and an adjustment of economic conditions.

MAYER, HOOVER GUEST, SEES BETTER ERA

Film Magnate Confident Of Political, Economic Gain; Asks President to Games

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Every subject from the Olympic games to the Republican national convention was discussed by President Hoover and Louis B. Mayer, motion picture magnate, guest at a White House luncheon yesterday. Mr. Mayer said later:

"I am hopeful the President will attend the opening of the Olympiad. I am not quite certain that he will be able to make the trip, however, but I am hopeful. It all depends on the business conditions of the country at that time."

HONORED AT DINNER

In addition to being a White House guest, Mr. Mayer was guest last night at a brilliant dinner given in his honor by Mabel Walker Willebrandt, the 100 guests including Vice President Curtis and his sister, "Dolly" Gann.

After his talk with the President Mr. Mayer said he feels more confident than ever that there is a decided improvement in the situation, politically and economically. He referred to the rise in stocks yesterday and the efforts the President has been making to remedy economic conditions. He continued:

"Babe Ruth is just a ball player when he strikes out, but a hero when he hits the ball. The situation is much like that in reference to the President. I have observed a very distinct trend in his favor within the last three months, particularly west of the Rockies."

FAVORS SALES TAX

Although Mr. Mayer said he did not discuss the political situation with the President, he said it is unfortunate that the country has not brought back beer and the attendant tax and revenue. He added:

"I feel that beer would have saved the situation, had we had the revenue several months ago.

"I should like to add also that rejection of the general manufacturers' sales tax is unfortunate. The people here do not seem to understand it. They think that it would be a tax several times multiplied, when as a matter of fact it is only one tax."

Mr. Mayer, who is going to Chicago as a Republican committeeman, said that he hoped to be able to use Mrs. Gann, sister of the Vice President, extensively as a speaker on the West coast. He continued:

"She has the glamour and attractiveness of a real actress. She really draws and attracts people and I think is one of the most attractive personalities in public life. She should prove to be a great asset to the party."

Mr. Mayer left for New York late last night and after conferences there will go to Chicago.

AUTO SMASHED IN RUM CHASE

Captured by prohibition agents yesterday after a chase that resulted in the demolition of his automobile, John Smith, whose address agents refused to reveal, was held for arraignment before the United States Commissioner today.

The five-mile chase ended when Smith's machine rolled into a flower garden of a Homestead residence. Smith jumped over a steep embankment in an attempt to flee, but one of the agents, an ex-wrestler, captured him after the two had rolled to the bottom of the ravine. Smith, bruised in the scuffle, was treated at United States Marine Hospital.

In the wrecked automobile agents reported finding 10 gallons of moonshine.

In a Lawn street raid the agents seized 500 pints of beer, seven gallons of whisky and seven pints of gin and arrested Edwin Fetter, it was reported.

Bandit Bullet Hits Policeman's Whistle

Mansfield Cowan, Negro patrolman of the North Side, wants the world to know that he was actually fired upon—and hit—by bandits while he chatted with Martin Connelly, night attendant at the Standard Auto Service Station, Manchester boulevard, early Friday. Cowan exhibited to Capt. Anthony Block today a bullet hole in his trousers' pocket. The bullet lodged in his traffic whistle. Finding no trace of bullet holes in the station, police said the bandits' gun evidently was filled with blank cartridges.

Bees Rout Players In Billiard Room

A swarm of bees created excitement in Diamond street and in the Elliott lunchroom and Grand billiard room, 328 Diamond street, yesterday. Billiard games ended abruptly when the buzzing bees invaded the building. The swarm took refuge on the roof ventilator of the building. George A. Bleichner, proprietor of the billiard room, offered the swarm to the first man who can take them away.

Cards, Chips Seized In Raid, 15 Arrested

Six card tables, poker chips and cards were confiscated when police led by Lieut. James J. Callaghan, raided an alleged gambling establishment on the second floor of 210 Federal street, last night. Michael Haddock, alleged proprietor, and 14 visitors were arrested.

BOGGS & BUHL 63rd ANNIVERSARY

BEGINS ITS SECOND WEEK MONDAY

Looking back over the past week, we feel just a bit proud of the results of the 63rd Anniversary to date. Despite the fact that prices are considerably lower than last year many departments are ahead in volume. This proves to us that people are shopping in the store where their dollar means the most.

We've reordered on many items and are ready for a tremendous second week starting Monday. You'll find ample assortments of the values that made the first week so successful and many brand new specials. Watch the announcements from day to day. All items listed on sale tonight and Monday.

ON THE AIR -:- -:- News About Studios And Broadcasters

George Seibel Network Speaker

George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph, who is heard every Saturday and Tuesday at 7 p. m. from Station WCAE, broadcasts over the NBC-WEAF network for the second time today at 4:30 from the studios of WRC in Washington, D. C. The broadcast is heard here on WCAE.

Mr. Seibel

Speaking in connection with the George Washington Bicentennial Anniversary Celebration throughout the country, Seibel's topic will be "George Washington, Boy." Among his books which have been a series of stories closely associated with Washington is a complete literary history of the tents of Washington and his choice of authors.

Mr. Seibel is a contributor to many magazines and is the author of several plays, including a drama. The play was produced several years ago.

The new Webster Hall studios of WWSW are officially opened tonight at 8 when a program of classical and semi-classical music is presented by the 60-voice Duquesne Choral Society of Duquesne, Pa., under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Osborne, director of music of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. The station will continue to operate from the Hotel Schenley in addition to Webster Hall.

Miss Lester

William H. Oetting presents another of his organ lecture-recitals on the works of the old masters on WWSW tonight at 7:30.

The second of a series of operatic programs by artists who are spending the summer at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., is heard on WCAE today at 3:30. The program is under the direction of Alberto Sturnel, well-known conductor.

The story of the invention of the Hodgen splint by John Thomas Hodgen during the Civil War is dramatized during the Danger Fighters' program on KDKA tonight at 8.

More than 100 members of the choir and couple mixed quartet of the David B. Oliver High School, under the supervision of Miss Ethel Dixon, are heard from KDKA today at 4:15.

For dancers tonight WCAE offers another continuous two hours of rhythmic tunes. George Olsen's orchestra is heard during the cigaret hour at 10, followed by Russ Columbo at 11, the WCAE orchestra at 11:15 and the Hotel New Yorker orchestra from 11:30 until midnight.

Blossom Seeley, heard on NBC with Benny Fields, was once associated with Lon Chaney in an early theatrical venture. Ben Grauer, NBC announcer, appeared in films with such favorites of yesterday as Theda Bara, Pauline Frederick and Carlisle Blackwell, while still in his 'teens. During the summer Bill Schudt, of "Going to Press" fame, will officiate at some of the late dance programs over CBS. The Thursday morning "Ellen and Roger" skits on KQV featuring Cal Mara and Ted Rave is now in its ninetieth week.

Question Box

What is Gene Austin doing now? Where is he? J. H., Braddock.

Austin recently signed an exclusive contract with the NBC Artists Service, and is heard Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights over WMAQ, NBC's Chicago station. He is in Chicago. Incidentally, did you know that Austin's style of song led to "whispering" and "crooning?" Imitators who couldn't reproduce his style, because of Austin's great range, turned to these other types of singing.

American Weekly Talk on WCAE

A discussion of the numerous articles of interest to all readers, published in the American Weekly magazine which is distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, and in the March of Events section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph is heard during the "American Weekly" broadcast on WCAE tonight at 7.

News flashes are broadcast to WCAE listeners direct from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News.

MOVE TO FARM PLEASES COX

Father Cox is today more enthusiastic than ever about the potential possibilities of a "back to the soil" movement. He said:

"The poor will be with us always, but the poor will not starve if we get them back to the soil. Old 'Mother Earth' is rich and willing—all she requires is attention. To be sure you can't grow a suit of clothes or an evening gown out of the earth, but you can always bank on the soil as a producer of food if the man who needs the the food will do his part. Food is the first essential. I am glad to see that Gov. Pinchot and his welfare aides have at last come to the conclusion that I was right when I advocated the 'back to the farm' movement two years ago. 'Coxtown,' to my mind, is only a starter for a general 'back to the soil' movement that will grow to great proportions."

Father Cox

For every subscription that comes in on the special home delivery blank herewith printed and for every subscription otherwise secured through the efforts of the "father of the jobless" and his aides, Father Cox gets a liberal commission in cash which is employed to furnish food and clothing to his army of destitute men, women and children. Here is your opportunity to help a more than worthy cause and at the same time bring a GOOD newspaper to your home.

W. R. Hearst Denounces Shotgun Methods of Taxation

HOW IS THIS possible?

Because the Federal government and the various state and municipal governments have issued thousands of millions of dollars of bonds which are free from taxation; and if a man puts his money into these bonds the income cannot be taxed; while if he puts it into productive industry of the kind that creates wealth and gives us all employment, it can be taxed.

Obviously then the higher the income taxes are, the more money will go out of productive industry, and the more will go into tax-exempt securities.

The disadvantages of excessive income taxation are, therefore, threefold:

First, it reduces buying and consequently injures business and industry;

Second, it drives money out of investment in constructive and productive industry into idle tax-exempt investment, and so decreases employment and diminishes the creation of wealth;

Third, it does not proportionately increase the government's income from taxation, because the people find ways of evading unjust taxation, and the government has thoughtfully provided a way by issuing tax-exempt securities.

THE WHOLE SYSTEM of income taxation has degenerated into a racket, in which the people try to cheat the government and the government tries to rob the people.

It is moreover an un-American tax system, which aggravates class distinctions, develops class hatreds and will eventually divide our homogenous people into the two conflicting extremes of Communism and Fascism.

The sooner this impudent, intrusive, despotic, discriminatory and perhaps revolutionary tax is repealed the better it will be for the honesty, the industry, the wealth and the welfare of our country.

Then say you finally:

"Well, what about this manufacturers' sales tax which was recently submitted to the House of Representatives by Speaker Garner and Acting Chairman Crisp of the Ways and Means Committee, and was rejected by the Insurgents of the House, led by Mr. La Guardia, of New York, and Mr. Swing, of California?

"Did not President Hoover appear personally in the Senate to speak in indorsement of this kind of taxation?

"What kind of a tax is that?"

MY FRIENDS, IT is a small tax of two or three per cent levied at the factory upon all manufactured articles except food and clothing. It is a form of taxation which has been in successful operation in Canada for a number of years.

This manufacturer's sales tax is called in Canada, where they have had ample experience with it, the "painless tax," because nobody ever knows when he is paying it.

This tax is in Canada a tax of four per cent, levied upon all manufactured articles at the selling source of their manufacture.

You pay the tax in the sales price when you buy the article, just as you pay the tariff tax when you buy an imported article, and you do not have a tax collector coming around at the end of the year when your money is gone, compelling you to pay by hook or by crook a lot of taxes you did not even know were due.

The tax collectors of the manufacturer's sales tax do not bother the purchaser at all. They collect the tax from the manufacturer.

"But," say you, "Can our manufacturers afford to pay this small tax?"

WELL, THEY SHOULD be able to.

They have benefited by high tariff taxation for many years which has largely excluded foreign goods and has given our manufacturers a monopoly of the American market, so surely they can contribute something towards the support of the government in return for this protection.

"All right," say you, "But can the buyer afford to pay this tax, even though it be concealed in the price of his purchases?

Well, my friends, let me ask you to answer that question yourselves.

Suppose an article, not food or clothing, cost a dollar and ten cents and the tax made it cost a dollar and fifteen cents, and you wanted the article and had the money to buy it.

Would you buy it?

I think you would.

NOW, SUPPOSE THERE was no sales tax, and the article only cost a dollar and ten cents instead of a dollar and fifteen cents and you did NOT have the money to buy it, would you buy it?

I hope you would NOT.

Therefore is it not obvious that a small fluctuation in price is not as important as POSSESSING THE INCOME WITH WHICH TO BUY?

And, therefore, is it not equally obvious that it is better to impose a small manufacturer's sales tax on articles than it is to impose heavy income taxes which will reduce incomes and cut down the purchasing power of the community?

Many merchants have shortsightedly opposed the sales tax, but they should learn better from their daily experiences.

They hold sales today at half-price and the shops are half empty.

Formerly when the people had better incomes the merchants held sales at full prices and the shops were full of purchasers.

THE IMPORTANT THING to the merchants, as to everyone else, is not merely the price of the goods, but the purchasing power of the community.

"Then," say you, "Why does not Congress pass the manufacturer's sales tax to secure revenue and Speaker Garner's public works bill to relieve unemployment and go home?"

Well, my friends, the plain facts are that our Senators and Representatives are hopelessly floundering. They do not know exactly what to do in the grave emergency which confronts them, so they are trying many radical and ridiculous things and making a bad situation constantly worse.

They are like the ignorant doctor who does not know how to cure his patient and so gives him a dose of everything in the medicine chest in the hope that something will hit the mark.

That kind of doctoring is called shotgun practice. Our estimable Senators and Representatives are indulging in legislative shotgun practice and we are going to get the whole load of shot right in the small of the back and it is not going to do us any good.

THEN WHAT IS the lesson to be learned from the iniquitous tax measures which will be imposed upon us by Congress?

The lesson to be learned is to take more interest in our politics and to elect Senators and Representatives who will know how to raise the necessary revenue for the government in a conservative and constructive manner and who will be careful not to reduce the incomes and decrease the purchasing power of the people of the United States.

For in that direction lie depression and disaster.

Elect Senators and Representatives who will realize the necessity of giving employment to the people, of enlarging the purchasing power of the community, of making possible the liberal buying which supports all business and industry.

For in that way lies the speedy and rational return to American prosperity.

Girl, Former School Athlete, Sought

Police today were searching in Maryland for Barbara Billups, 19, of 332 Jucunda street, former South Hills High School student who disappeared Monday. According to her mother, she started with a girl friend to a theater, but left her companion and has not been seen since. The family has relatives in Cumberland and Meadville, Md. Until a year ago Miss Billups was active in athletic events at the high school.

Farewell Services For Salvationists

Farewell services for officers of the Salvation Army who leave local headquarters for work in Vandergrift, will be held tomorrow night in the auditorium, 425 Boulevard of the Allies. Capt. Dorothy Messenger and Capt. Helen Snow will be honored at the service. Adjt. John Brunner will take charge of the morning service, at 11 o'clock, as well as the night service.

De Paul Institute Class to Graduate

Annual commencement exercises of the De Paul Institute, oral school for the deaf in Brookline, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the school. Diplomas will be presented by the Rev. Dr. T. F. Coakley. There will be an exhibition of physical culture and dancing with the school open for inspection.

The graduates are: Cecelia A. Duffy, Edward M. Bowers, Margaret M. Coaches, Jerry L. Deasy, Anna J. Jaczko, Rose Anna Lavric and Edward A. Steiner.

To Open Gardens

For the first time the famous gardens of exclusive Sewickley estates will be open to the public with a small charge to be made for admission for the benefit of the welfare work of the Allegheny General Hospital.

The dates for these garden pilgrimages are June 11 and 12, June 18 and 19, June 25 and 26, with the hours from 3 to 7 o'clock.

Rock gardens, vegetable gardens and the cutting gardens all will be open to sight-seers. In charge of this garden-visiting plan are Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., chairman; Mrs. William B. Trainer, Mrs. C. I. Shannon, Mrs. Maitland Alexander and Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis.

Homer Wedding

Of great interest here is the wedding of Anne Homer, daughter of the Sidney Homers, and Robert Warner, of Greenwich, Conn., which took place Thursday at the Homer summer home near Bolton Landing, Lake George, N. Y.

Mrs. Homer, I hardly need add, is Mme. Louise Homer, Metropolitan opera singer, who lived in Pittsburgh when a young woman.

And among the guests was Mrs. Finley Hall Lloyd, of Pittsburgh.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. Ernest Van Rens S. Stires, of Richmond, Va., brother-in-law of the bride.

Katherine Homer, twin sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Edward Warner, former under secretary of the Navy, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Eastern Wedding

Emily Frew has been in the East, where she attended the wedding yesterday afternoon of Elizabeth Dickson Boies, daughter of Mrs. Davis Boies, of Scranton, and Reeve Schley, Jr., son of the Schleys, of New York and Far Hills, N. J. The wedding took place in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Scranton, with the Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Drury, headmaster of St. Paul's School, officiating.

June 18 is the date chosen by Miss Jean Hope Hustead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edgar Hustead, for her marriage to Albert Tucker Phelps, son of William Henry Phelps, of Caracas, Venezuela. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Uniontown, with the rector, the Rev. Donald Kent Johnston, officiating.

Miss Hustead attended Winchester and is a graduate of Miss Dow's School. Her fiance will graduate this month from Yale. They will live in Caracas after their marriage.

Society Folk Turn Out En Masse For Benefit Horse Show at Sewickley Heights

More and more folks kept arriving all day yesterday at the show ring, Sewickley Heights, for the second day of the annual Allegheny Country Club Horse Show, being given for the benefit of the Allegheny County Emergency Association Relief Fund. And the largest attendance of the week is expected today, the closing day.

White with vivid colors for accent is most popular, with prints and stripes much in vogue, both in cotton and silk.

Garbed In White

Harriet Fickes was in blue with a blue turban. Betty McKay in a wide-waled white pique frock. Mrs. A. C. Martin chose a yellow and black and white printed crepe with which she wore a black hat, and Mrs. J. O. Burgwin wore a rose and white crepe dress with a leghorn hat.

Mrs. Burgwin's little daughter, Virginia, had a smart blue and white cotton frock, trimmed with appliqued blue morning glories, and her white hat boasted morning glories, too.

Choose Blues

Mrs. Homer Saint-Gaudens, accompanied by Mr. Saint-Gaudens, wore a linen frock with the bodice of white, trimmed in yellow, and a skirt of brown.

Others I noted in the throng were Mrs. Donald Bakewell in a cream knitted suit and a brown straw hat, Phyllis and Louise Totten in smart red and white cotton prints and white turbans, Miss Margaret Coulter in white crepe and Mrs. Charles Arrott, III, in a green and white printed cotton frock.

Sitting in a car parked by the ringside were Susan O'Neil in yellow printed crepe and a yellow hat, Lydia Irish in white roshanara crepe and Gretchen Bickford in a white knitted frock.

Near the ringside was Mrs. Henry Clay Bughman, Jr., in shell pink crepe with a blue straw hat and Mrs. Ralph W. Lynch in white crepe with cape sleeves and a red, white and blue sash and white turban.

Sitting in her box was Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis, wearing white crepe and a straw hat to match. Others there were Margaret Holdship in yellow crepe with a turban to match, and Stella Coulter in riding habit.

Chatting with Mary Elizabeth Floyd was Katharine Collin in a natty grey and black crepe ensemble in herringbone print with the jacket having capes for sleeves. With the suit she wore a blue and silver turban. Mary Elizabeth chose a white crepe dress with a brief blue jacket and a white hat.

In Car At Ring

Strolling about the ring, I saw Mrs. Thomas J. Hilliard, in yellow, brown and white printed crepe with a yellow turban. Marie Louise Bickford chose white, and I saw Laura Childs with Bertha Brooks at the ringside. Laura wore white linen with a white hat, and Bertha chose black and yellow crepe with a pleated peplum and white turban. In a box I noticed Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Jr., in brown and cream sheer crepe with a white hat.

In another box were Mary Childs, in robin's egg blue crepe with a matching hat; Eloise Dorrance in pink silk jersey with a pale blue straw hat. Betty Kennedy was attractive in a boucle ensemble of yellow with the blouse of orange, brown and yellow stripes, with a panama.

Yellow Ensemble

Caroline Mitchell wore a knitted yellow frock with a black asterisk design, and I saw Mrs. George H. Love, in a box wearing pink boucle with a blue hat. Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland chose a rose and black print with a white hat and Mrs. Harvey Childs, III, brown and white striped cotton crepe, with a meshknit hat. I saw Mrs. B. F. Jones, II., too, in blue and white linen with a blue straw hat.

Oil City's Chest Fund Gains in Drive

OIL CITY, Pa., June 4.—Oil City's community chest fund on the second day of its campaign swept forward to $47,386, with contributions of $22,165 reported today. The goal is slightly over $80,000.

Social Notes

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Helen Mooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Mooney, of Lyon Park, Va., to John Clevenger Knee, of Pittsburgh, son of Mrs. Kate H. Knee, of Lyon Park, which took place in St. Charles' Church, Clarendon, Va., on Thursday.

Wed in Virginia

MODELS FORETELL POPULARITY OF NATURAL-COLORED TWEEDS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 4. — Natural-colored tweed will be important for country and beach clothes this coming summer—at least if French prophecies are any indication. At the winter resorts along the Riviera, where the first sunshine of the year brings out the clothes that are slated as advance fashions, many women seemed to prefer this natural-colored fabric, with its lightly creamy tinge, to those that were either all-white or frankly beige.

OFTEN AS not, the coat or dress made of this type of material appears in town as well as in the country. This year several designers are showing both dresses and coats, as well as jacket-and-skirt combinations, made of this light tweed.

THERE ARE black touches, too, on the dress which Worth puts under this coat. The belt is of black leather; the buttons, of black galalith. The entire frock is cut on the bias, to give the effect that the material has simply been wound around and around the figure. The neckline is youthfully high and marked by a rounded line just at the base of the throat.

Congress Home Department Given Hints on Changing Rooms With Modest Outlay

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

In her "Oh, For a Change" talk given yesterday before the home department of the Congress of Clubs, Miss Elsie Howischer, of Boggs & Buhl, showed the women how they might, with little financial outlay, change the appearance of their homes. She had set up at one end of the auditorium three attractive groups of furniture, rugs, lights and even wall coverings and drapes with which she illustrated her points.

Miss Howischer talked a bit about the different "periods" of furniture, the changes that have been made in furniture in styles, not all of them good, and said that in the furniture of today one finds the design and line of those periods when craftsmanship was at its best.

Present Songs

A group of songs, the words and music of which are by the vesatile Mrs. Charles Morris Johnson, a former department chairman, were effectively sung by Mrs. Adele Eggers Furniss, of Elwood City, with Mrs. W. H. Patterson at the piano.

Mrs. Evelyn Gardiner Saudek has been reappointed chairman of the department, and has named Miss Josephine Gibson, chairman of program; Mrs. J. C. Eckel, of membership, and Mrs. George Wise, of decorations.

Music on Program

A new note is to be introduced into this month's meeting of the National Better Magazines Council. Not only will there be the usual meeting with an address, but there's to be a program of music, refreshments will be served and the meeting hour has been changed to 2 o'clock. Dr. Ralph S. Munn, director of Carnegie Library, is the speaker and the members are reminded to bring guests.

Mrs. J. F. McCrory, chairman for the day, has as aides Miss Ruth Agnes Danforth and Mrs. F. C. Volker. The meeting will take place in Kaufmann's dining room.

Annual Meeting

The Norcross Club will meet for its final luncheon on Friday in the Garden Tea Room. Reservations are being made through Mrs. Charles W. McCree, of Aspinwall.

Miss Miller

Miss Dorothy M. Miller is chairman for the annual spring luncheon being held today at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association by the Alumnae Association of the H. C. Frick Training School.

* * *

Mrs. Charles L. Reinenstein, retiring chairman of the publicity department, Council of Jewish Women, will be hostess at luncheon to the club editors of the city newspapers at her home in South Aiken avenue on Monday.

Hostess To Board

Luncheon in the Garden Tea Room on Sunday, June 12, will be followed by the annual meeting of the Montefiore Aid Society. A program will round out the afternoon. Mrs. Ben Amdur is chairman of reservations.

* * *

Mrs. James E. Bay, president of the Health Colony Club, will entertain the board of directors at luncheon in the Congress of Clubs in conjunction with the regular board meeting on Tuesday.

City Club Bridge To Be Festive Occasion

A particularly festive occasion is to be made of the Woman's City Club bridge party next Saturday afternoon which is the closing one in a series. It is to be held in the William Penn ballroom with all sorts of attractive features, by no means the least of which will be the presence of a number of pretty young aides. Among them will be Marie and Marguerite McCahill, Louise Baton, Betty Dalbey, Barbara Peirce, Jane Phillips, Harriet Young, Jane and Mary Griffith, Dorothy and Kathryn Whipple, Margaret Eichleay, Elinore and Phyllis Hoelzel, Georgette Casselman, Dot Jane Langfitt, Dorothy Clark, Gertrude Russell, Nancy Jane Longenecker, Elisabeth Kirkpatrick, Roberta Speller, Joan Dodds, Katharine Eaton, Catherine Cuthbert, Betsey Cuthbert, Jean Keister, Marian Black, Mary Stephenson, Helen Ruth Delke and Constance Bell.

To Wed June 16

Miss Gertrude Clara Geisler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Geisler, McMunn avenue, Crafton, has chosen Thursday, June 16, as the date for her marriage to Howard L. Kaness. The ceremony will take place in the bride's home at 7:30 o'clock, the Rev. Harry Allan Price, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Crafton, officiating.

Miss Ann Dolores Smith, of Brouhton, will be bridesmaid, Mrs. C. J. Griffiths, sister of the bride, will sing preceding the ceremony, little Doris Gertrude Griffiths will act as flower girl and Mr. Kaness has asked Marion Lucas Grier, of Ingram, to serve as best man.

STOCK BUYERS USED 'BRAVE' DOLLARS

Backed With Cash Belief In U. S. Securities During Recent Shaken Markets

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, June 4.—Perhaps more could be learned by analyzing the buying, rather than the selling, in recent distressed security markets.

Apart from mere technical short covering and support, buyers used "courageous" dollars. These buyers, whatever time may prove, were well informed. Values they were not rushed into the market by stock customers, nor by the average broker's customer. Many of the 1929 purchases were. There is some basis for optimism and for the attitude of these present day buyers, who were willing to bank the trend and ignore immediate and perfectly obvious near-term adverse factors.

Mr. Rukeyser

Recognizing that the public is to some extent unknowable, these buyers were willing to back with cash their belief that all prevailing prices shares in outstanding American corporations—equities which constitute claims on future prosperity when and if were available for a pittance. Stocks can now be bought virtually as cheap as warrants and other options, which had potential value only, were selling during the boom.

SOUND ACTION

One banker it will be recalled declared that securities were dropping into the lape of the rich men of 1935.

The cash buyers who put in bids during the tornado were obviously ready to ride the storm and bide their time and wait for ultimate fair weather. They ignored the prevailing emotionalism and hysteria and acted on the basis of arithmetical averages.

Inasmuch as business is going through a Nietzschean period of selection, in which the fit alone will survive, it is obviously desirable for those who are seeking to lay the basis for a new fortune on the foundation of panic prices to select securities of companies which are not topheavy in capitalization and which appear to have the quality of durability. Outstanding companies in industries which appear to have a satisfactory long term future are preferable.

With numerous interest bearing bonds quoted at default prices they might be considered virtual equities, because of the theoretical possibilities of appreciation through the years as they approach maturity.

The risks of stepping into the very teeth of panicky liquidation are perfectly obvious. The prudent decline to go into debt to take advantage of seeming "bargains." The conservative, though perhaps willing to buy experimentally, are still unwilling to exhaust their buying power and still recognize the safety that comes from keeping a reasonable share of their resources in cash assets.

PROBE HURT STOCKS

However warranted the inquiry by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency may have been from a fundamental standpoint, its scandalous revelations tended further to contract security buying power, which had already been shriveled by the sensational decline this year in business profits. Moreover, the stock exchange gestures against short selling, as a sop to ignorant opinion, further interfered with orderly markets. The 15-point margin on short sales was a further deterrent to speculation on this side of the market. Accordingly, on dips the normal support from short covering was not forthcoming.

When queried concerning plans for a bond pool, a spokesman for a banking house of international fame remarked:

"A circus puts up posters when it comes to town."

The inner circle in Wall street would like to see the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation broadened so that it could lend to railroad corporations to enable them to repurchase in the open market their outstanding bonds at prevailing low levels. This, it is argued, would enable them to cut down their debt and fixed charges and thus improve their financial status as well as to boost the prices of their bonds, thus improving the asset position of financial institutions owning railroad bonds.

The proposal is in line with the philosophy of wooing back prosperity through manipulation and ballyhoo. A sounder method would be to make securities worth more by enhancing business profits by means of enlarging the gross turnover of business.

LOCAL RETAIL TRADE FAIR

Seasonable merchandise is moving in moderate volume and business during the past week has been fair in such lines as women's wear, but not much activity is noted in men's wearing apparel, such sales as there are being very largely of cheaper grades. Sales Dun's review of local conditions. The movement of straw hats is at a fair rate with prices lower than a year ago. There is some demand for certain lines of hardware and garden tools, but builders hardware and building material continues to move very slowly.

Industrial operations are at a slightly lower rate although some plants are expected to increase operations to a slight extent, particularly those which have orders from automobile sources. The market for plate and window glass shows no improvement, principal activity being in safety glass for automobile use.

'STREET' LOANS AT NEW LOW

NEW YORK, June 4.—The New York Stock Exchange reports collateral borrowings of members at the close of business May 31 amounted to $300,397,222, a decrease of $78,619,440 as compared with the April 30 total of $379,016,662 and a new low record. On May 31, 1931, these loans amounted to $1,434,653,650, while the record high level was established at the end of September, 1929, at $8,549,263,979.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—Bank clearings were at a somewhat higher rate this week than in the preceding week, considering that this week includes only five business days. The larger amount reflects the heavier June 1 settlements. In this week only one June day is included, whereas a year ago there were three. A very large reduction, however, compared with last year appears. Total clearings this week for all leading cities in the United States as reported to Dun's Review of $4,054,046,000 were 53.3 per cent smaller than a year ago. At New York City clearings were $2,809,979,000, a decline of 55.9 per cent, while the total for the cities outside of New York of $1,248,067,000 was 46.2 per cent smaller.

The increase over last week was at New York City and was largely due to heavier financial settlements. Losses compared with a year ago continue heavy at New York as well as at the other large eastern and western centers. They are against somewhat smaller at a number of southern points. Clearings this year continue to make an unsatisfactory exhibit, the decline during May being slightly in excess of the preceding months this year.

Artkraft Volume Of Sales Increased

The Artkraft Sign Company reports an increase of 8 per cent in volume of business in April as compared with April last year. For the first four months of 1932, according to R. R. Trubey, president, dollar sales were approximately 10 per cent greater than the corresponding 1931 period. This indicates a substantial increase in unit sales. Mr. Trubey points out, in view of the fact that prices have been reduced from 35 to 50 per cent from those of a year ago. The Neon Service Corporation is the local distributor for the Artkraft Company.

Pierce, Butler to Be Reorganized

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 4.—The plan for reorganization of Pierce, Butler and Pierce Manufacturing Company provides for an 18 months' bank credit of $500,000. By obtaining this credit the corporation will be able to pay off present secured bank debt thereby releasing to working capital some $450,000 of receivables and $40,000 in cash now held as security. The company's plant in Oswego, manufacturing engines and boilers, has recently booked new business and operations are being expanded.

20 COMPANIES EXPECTED TO CUT

Action Will Be Taken on Dividends by 52 Boards During Month of June

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—June is one of Wall street's important dividend months, ranking second in importance to the season when so-called Christmas dividend meetings are held.

No less than 52 leading corporations will act on dividend payments this month. There will also be meetings by directors of many small companies whose stocks are not listed on the two principal New York exchanges.

ACTION UNCERTAIN

While forecasting probable dividend actions is admittedly precarious, investment statisticians are obliged to attempt to determine the probabilities. One such statistician forecasts that 11 corporations this month will pay their regular rates.

Fourteen companies this authority calculates will omit their dividend payments, while 20 companies are expected to reduce their schedules. Of the remaining seven companies their probable action falls in the category of uncertain. In some cases it is probable that the directors themselves are not certain whether they should omit, cut or pay the regular quarterly rates.

Among the principal dividend meetings scheduled this month are Standard Gas and Electric, Western Union, Air Reduction, National Steel, American Gas and Electric, New Haven preferred, Otis Elevator, Pullman, Pacific Gas and Electric, Sears Roebuck, Electric Power and Light, Northern Pacific, Corn Products, Allied Chemical, American Can and Westinghouse Electric.

PEAK IN 1930

Total dividend payments by all American corporations reached their zenith in 1930, although business downturn had started the year before. Dividend payments that year totaled $4,200,000,000, or an average monthly rate of $350,000,000. In 1931 the total was $3,700,000,000, or at a $305,000,000-a-month rate.

In the first four months of this year the total was $1,000,000,000, or at a $250,000,000-a-month rate. This rate has been reduced substantially in recent weeks. Changes announced last week, for instance, included a reduction by the General Electric Company and omission of all dividends by the Cities Service group.

Wall Street Spectator

Street More Cheerful, But Still Very Wary

NEW YORK, June 4.—(INS)—Wall street is more cheerful today, but still very cautious. A real market in bonds is promised now by the banking pool, which is of the utmost significance in view of the part senior obligations play in the financial fabric of the nation. Stocks have had a good rally and yesterday met with some natural profit-taking. It would not be surprising if there were more of this today, but stocks will take care of themselves if bonds regain some semblance of their old value.

One encouraging thing about the market was that volume dried up noticeably on the decline.

This is a preliminary indication that forced liquidation may be over. If borne out in the next few days, it will be very important.

But from the way things look now there won't be much lost by waiting a few days before trying to nick the next rally for a few points. Stocks have proved they can still go up rapidly enough for all but the few who still like to see 'em skyrocket. Buying in the last few days has been pretty well concentrated, with three houses reported to have taken on about 250,000 shares of stock. It may be that some of the old professionals are trying their hand again. A good deal of selling came into American Telephone on the bulge yesterday on reports that liquidation had not been completed. Pittsburgh is said to be a little more hopeful on Steel and Westinghouse.

Texas Cotton Crop Has Fair Progress

DALLAS, June 4.—In spite of the absence of any real cotton weather, progress of the Texas crop for the week ended June 2 has been generally fair except in localities where heavy rains caused erosian, the Dallas News cotton condition report states. Planting is rapidly nearing termination in all sections and should be completed by next week.

Consolidation Coal Committee Formed

The formation of a protective committee for holders of first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds of Consolidation Coal Company, in receivership, has been announced. Interest due June 1 on the bonds was defaulted. Howard Bruse, of the Baltimore Trust Company, is chairman of the committee.

NEARBY STEEL PROSPECTS VAGUE

Trade Hopes Developments At Washington Will Spur Demand in Coming Months

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel demand was curtailed by the holiday and after allowance is made there was still a slight decrease. The general production rate may be estimated at about 22 per cent, against an average of 22½ per cent in the first four weeks of May and 21½ per cent during June.

There are mixed prospects for the next two months as to demand increasing or decreasing. By the precedents of active times production would decrease. July being always a low month and frequently the lowest of the year, but in these times precedents have been of little value. There was no clearly discernible seasonal increase in the early months of this year. Hopes are entertained that developments at Washington will produce such favorable reactions in the financial and business worlds that steel will be helped and show some increase in activity in the next two months.

For a marked improvement in demand the steel trade has September in mind, when some of the accumulating requirements may be filled.

PRICES HOLDING WELL

Finished steel prices have been holding well, the market being stabilized except that there are still some relatively low prices made on fabricated structural steel work. It is fully expected that third-quarter prices on bars, shapes and plates will be unchanged. Slight advances in sheet prices are expected to be announced within a week or two. An advance of $2 a ton in semi-finished steel was announced several weeks ago, to become effective for the third quarter.

Steel purchases are being made by the Ford Motor Company from time to time rather than for the entire month. Total Ford requirements will run much heavier than those of last month, but there are such decreases in the remainder of the automobile industry that the steel trade doubts whether this month will bring any material increase, if any, in the sum total of automobile trade requirements.

Fabricated structural steel lettings reported in the last two weeks totaled about 50,000 tons, representing a rate nearly double that of earlier in the year, but following seven weeks of particularly light lettings.

RAIL BUYING STILL LOW

Railroad buying of steel is still very low, but apparently with an upward trend.

Steel for highly miscellaneous purposes is making a much better showing than steel for the big classifications, building, railroad, automobile and oil.

Heavy melting steel scrap delivered Pittsburgh had a 75-cent drop this week, purchases being made for Donora delivery at $9.25 against $10 paid early last month. The market was already at record low in the history of the scrap trade. Chicago and Eastern Pennsylvania have been at about $6.50.

There are no signs of seasonal opening of the Lake Superior iron ore market, which has grown very narrow in recent years, consumers having supplies of their own.

Kreuger Bankers Assessment Asked

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—The independent protective committee of Kreuger & Toll debenture bondholders which under direction of Samuel Untermyer, counsel, has been waging a fight against the protective committee formed by Kreuger & Toll bankers and their associates, today held out a conditional offer to co-operate.

The promise was made on condition that any contemplated "reorganization will involve substantial cash contributions by the banking houses that were concerned, by way of adjustment of their liability in connection with the circumstances under which the securities of these companies were issued and marketed to the public."

Europe Continues Gold Withdrawal

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP)—The outward flow of gold yesterday resulted in a net loss of $29,451,800 in the country's monetary stock of the metal.

Exports amounted to $24,758,300, of which $10,745,400 was withdrawn for shipment to Holland; $7,993,000 to Switzerland, $4,090,200 to Belgium, and $1,929,700 to France. Gold held under earmark for foreign account increased $6,800,400.

Imports totaled $1,021,900, of which $1,000,000 came from Uruguay and $21,900 from Mexico. The federal reserve bank was notified of the receipt at San Francisco of $1,085,000 gold from China.

STOCK PRICES ADVANCE ON BANK POOL

Formation of Securities Pool by Leading Bankers Sends Market Skyward

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—Securities markets resumed their advance in the early trading today, in response to formal announcement of formation of the Securities Investing Corporation, under sponsorship of powerful banking interests.

Stocks quickly resumed their advance, which had been interrupted by a sell-off in the last hour yesterday. During the first half hour a number of issues got up 1 to 2 points, including American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Bethlehem Steel, United States Steel, Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, Drug, Liggett and Myers "B," American Tobacco "B," Woolworth, National Biscuit, Public Service of New Jersey and others. General Electric and General Motors rose fractionally. Trading turned quiet after the first few minutes. Bonds were generally strong.

The new bank investing company, its sponsors said, is not to be a "bond pool," nor a "stabilization corporation," but has the very practical purpose of making profits in the security markets. Wall street assumed that with leading banks organized for bargain hunting, the effect on sentiment could hardly be anything but favorable, and it was pointed out that the permanence of the corporation, as contrasted with pools whose operations are usually brief and more or less artificial, was a strong point in its favor.

The heavy liquidation in security markets last month was strikingly reflected in the figures on borrowing by stock exchange member firms. A drop of $78,619,440 occurred, bringing the outstanding total as of May 31 to $300,397,222, which seems ridiculously low in comparison only with figures for a year ago.

Overnight Washington dispatches indicated that the tax bill might be ready for the President by Monday, thus bringing federal relief measures into legislative prominence.

U. S. EXTENDS REICH CREDIT

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in conjunction with other Reserve banks, has renewed its portion of the central bank credit to the Reichsbank. The interest rate has been reduced to 5 per cent from 6 per cent.

It is understood that extension of the credit involved no reduction in the principal.

Master to Decide Copper Mines Row

WILMINGTON, Del., June 4.—(AP.)—The question of the validity of the election of directors and officers of the Consolidated Copper Mines Corporation, of New York, will be brought before Clarence A. Southerland, Wilmington attorney, for a hearing.

Southerland has been appointed as master by the Chancery Court to take testimony in the suit filed by Paul Gow, of New York, against the corporation and the two sets of directors and officers, both of which declared they were legally elected.

France Puts Quotas On Many Imports

PARIS, June 4.—(AP.)—Presidential decrees have placed quota restrictions against importations of shoes, boots, slippers, fountain pens, certain types of pencils, silver jewelry, and artificial jewelry.

All these restrictions affect imports from the United States which, however, were lumped with all the countries generally without specification of particular amounts importable from the United States. Today's decrees were the last restrictions imposed by the retiring government of Andre Tardieu.

Stevens Receiver For Hotel Systems

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP.)—J. J. Stevens has been appointed receiver in equity for the La Salle Hotel Company and Stevens Hotel Company, Mr. Stevens is president of both companies. Receiver was asked for by the Beatrice Creamery Company.

The Stewart Ashby Coffee Company, Johnson & Quin and John Willy, Inc., are asking for a bankruptcy receiver for both companies.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

By Special Permission of The Etc.

Wear silver—wear gold if I choose
And flowers of fur;
My silliest satin shoes
To be prettier.

Go smiling or sad if I choose
The hour is my own.
I have little enough to lose
Going alone.

Be foolish or wise—if I choose,
Gay or profound. . . .
This is the trick men use
To keep us bound.

As It You Didn't Know

Romantic Note

Lupe Velez, movie Mexican actress, in Los Angeles explained why she made this observation while visiting the apartment of Eddie Buzzell. Eddie once was married to Ona Munson.

Oh, he Barrymore, Lupe is a photo of Ona on which Barrymore himself inscribed: "To Eddie. This ought to be a lesson to you." Eddie Buzzell.

Incidentally

On the way to the Pacific shores Mr. and Mrs. Barthelmess swapped chatter with us and Mr. B said among other things that he couldn't for the life of him understand why two people couldn't stay married.

Mr. Barthelmess ex-wife was Mary Hay.

Merciless Truth

The Santa Fe Chief had paused for 15 minutes at Albuquerque New Mexico and dozens of fans collected about Dick Barthelmess for his autograph.

It must be tough," said one towner, "to be bothered by people who keep asking for your autograph."

It must be tougher," replied Dick, "when they stop asking for it."

Heheheh

The Boston Post's Mr. Bill Cunningham did an essay for his newspaper recently which he christened "The Place of Fame."

In it Mr. Cunningham discussed out sudden, but temporary retirement from The American Scene and depending mainly on the current legends prepared a pretty gloomy paragraph.

Most interesting were these lines: "Within 48 hours the wolves had torn him to piece. The pallbearers were standing by marking time."

So sorreh to have disappointed you all.

Of All Complaints

We have been accused of many things in our columning capacity but never before have we served as the target for an autograph collector's finest.

In Los Angeles where we were convalescing from a mad desire not to work anymore a sissy who collected autographs on the side cornered us. We jotted down our handle in haste and hurried on to catch up to companions.

The next day however we learned that the autograph gatherer had phoned Harrison Carroll a columnist and urged him to scold us in print for "being so cold" when he asked for the autograph.

If he had only said that he was a conversationalist!

Add Sillies

Robert C. Benchley was ankling along the street brushing things off his sleeves. "I think," he was heard to groan, "I'll buy a Linit suit and pick up a little blue serge."

They Must Be "N. G."

At one of the radio stations the other day an announcer insisted upon telling his auditors that he was doing the announcing. Alf Friedman the studio manager crushed him. "Say," he thundered, "you certainly think a lot of yourself, don't you? Have you ever thought of calling the station by your name?"

"Yes," was the conceited one's retort, "several times—but I only have two initials."

Form of Criticism

Far be it from us to fingerpoint at the California prize-fing decisions after the offensive smell of the recent ones at Madison Not-So-Sq. Garden. But in Hollywood where there are no judges, only the referee, he usually lifts the arm of the fighter nearest him.

As a matter of fact, they said, once a referee out there lifted the arm of a winner while he was prone on the floor. After a recent decision which drew long and lusty groaning Abe Roth, the referee, was cornered in a restaurant by Rufus LeMaire.

"Did you get your share of the loot?" Rufe asked sarcastically.

"I should say not!" barked Roth.

"Well," sneered LeMaire, "you should have!"

Ouch

A conceited actor, with a head so big he could put three phrenologists to work if he were inquisitive, was quietly eating a sandwich in one of those shoppers. Another actor and Fred Allen happened in, and after ordering Allen's friend remarked: "Isn't that Gus Driffel eating over there alone?"

"Yeh," groaned Fred, who is a bit of a critic, "he's giving a banquet to his host of admirers!"

Auto Classic In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

America's 500-mile auto race classic at the Indianapolis Speedway, provides some of the most sensational scenes ever pictured and are shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. A record crowd of 150,000 packs the stands as the 40 speed demons start around the track with Billy Arnold the favorite. The north turn proves to be a hoodoo. First one car skids turns halfway around and plunges backward along the side fence within a couple of feet of the Hearst Metrotone cameraman; another skids on the same turn and crashes into the fence. The climax, however comes when Billy Arnold, leading and speeding at 113 miles an hour, skids on the same turn. His car flies high into the air as one wheel is torn off, crashes into the fence, somersaults and disappears from view. The race goes on as Freddy Frame, of Los Angeles, roars in a winner, having broken all existing records with an average speed of 104 miles an hour. Freddy tells all about the race and Arnold and his mechanic are carried from the field, neither seriously hurt. There is a graphic running description by the Globe Trottet. The current Hearst Metrotone News is being shown in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters.

SHOW AMELIA

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam is shown with Robert Gallagher and his wife on their farm at Londonderry, Ireland, where she landed in her plane at the end of her trans-Atlantic flight. She is shown with Dan McCallon, the farm hand who was the only person to see her actually land. Still in her flying suit she is also seen at Hanworth, England, at the conclusion of her flight there, where she is welcomed by Ambassador Mellon. Next she is seen and heard at the American Embassy where she relates some of the striking incidents of her daring flight.

Thrilling pictures show the start of the national balloon race from Omaha. The six gasbags are buffeted by a strong wind as they are about to start. Army Balloon No. 2 is dragged along the ground for some distance by the gale, finally rises and is swept away at terrific pace. It was this entry piloted by Lieuts. Paul and Bishop that landed 900 miles away at Saskatchewan, Canada, winning the contest and earning the right to enter the international races at Basle, Switzerland, next September.

SWAN IS GUARD

A novel picture comes from the estate of H. Frederick Hill at Tanglewood, L. I., where a swan acts as guardian over Mr. Hill's water fowl. A poacher who attempts to bag a couple of ducks is savagely pummeled by the swan guardian.

Miss Eleanor Hanley, of Hoboken, N. J., who won a prize of $110,000 on the Epsom Derby, talks of her good fortune at the home of her brother, County Judge William J. Hanley. She says she has not yet made up her mind what she will do with the money.

Fifty-two hundred orphan children of New York are seen and heard as they spend the day at Luna Park, Coney Island, as guests of the management.

'Bugs' Tells Real Inside Story Of Wall Street

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

If the Senate really wants to know what happened in Wall Street in 1929 we'll tell 'em.

A voice on the telephone said: "If you buy Consolidated Debris, put it away and forget it. You'll never have to worry some more."

We did it. And that's why grandma has such big teeth and why taxes are so high.

The man who telephoned was wrong three times for a nickel.

The Senators get paid more but their average is almost as high.

We hope this information is sufficient to stop the current investigation. Let's forget it and go about our business, if any.

Why dig into the tombs of the Pharoahs of 1929? It has been only three years ago, but we're deader than two barrels of salted mackerel.

Cohan Views Scene, Has Nerves

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.

Broadway's own George M. Cohan saw his first talkie scene made yesterday and he confesses to me he's nervous about his coming ordeal with the microphone.

The dapper showman made the confession after he had watched Tallulah Bankhead and Gary Cooper do some heavy emoting under the blazing lights on a Paramount set.

He shook his head and grimaced.

"I'm used to running all over the stage," he said ruefully. "But here they put you in one spot and tell you to act. I'm afraid I'll be self-conscious. That Gary Cooper, he seems a nice fellow, don't he," says to me. "Just wait till they put the chalk lines down for you."

"Well, I don't know. It all seems very intricate to me."

George Cohan

Mr. Cohan, who lived in New York since 1893 and has been in but one night club complains of the noise made by late revelers at his hotel here.

He's frankly curious about Hollywood and, he claims, not a bit cynical.

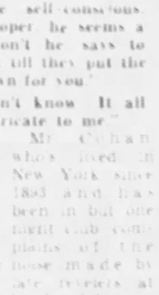
"It's a very different business from mine," he says. "I don't believe the theater can bring anything to the films in the way of direction. They are a different world.

"But the films are a big part of the show business now. Theatergoing in New York is reduced to a cult. You have to squeeze a hit dry there, because it won't go in the rest of the country. The talkies have replaced the road."

Mr. Cohan professes to be a regular patron of a neighborhood picture theater in New York. He considers Ernst Lubitsch's "Broken Lullaby" the most intelligent talking film he has ever seen.

His own debut of course will be in "The Phantom President" and he'll sing a number of songs.

Katharine Cornell's first night here in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" drew the most distinguished film crowd of the year. Tickets were so scarce that Norma Shearer, Irving Thalberg, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Goulding, Joan Bennett and Gene Markey were sitting in straight-backed chairs placed in a build-up orchestra pit. The audience looked like a film blue book.



Katharine Cornell

While two motion picture companies wait, Rex Bell and Clara Bow are superintending the annual roundup of 3,500 head of cattle on their 100,000-acre ranch. According to reports reaching Hollywood, Clara is rapidly losing the excess pounds that have to be taken off before she can make her film comeback at Fox.

Rex Bell may possibly be the first to go to work before the camera. Monogram Pictures have chosen "From Broadway to Cheyenne" as his first picture. It is a story of the fate that befalls an Eastern gangster when he comes to the cow country.

WHAT GOSSIPS SAY

Gary Cooper has been tiny-garment shopping in a Hollywood store. But hold on, the little dresses are for his chimpanzee. . . Hollywood stars are going through their seasonal trouble with sunburn. Irene Dunne went to sleep on the beach and got a second-degree burn on her face. Greta Nissen's skin is so fair that she has to wear a hat even when in the water. . . The Warner Brothers writers thought Memorial Day was a fine time to have an early morning tennis game at the deserted studio. They were shouting back and forth when an irate feminine face appeared at the window of a nearby bungalow. It was Ruth Chatterton. She lives in her bungalow, even on holidays.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 4.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Congress politically, but not economically, turned down the sales tax. Well, even out of the mouths of babes may come a good idea. Ham Lewis, a Senator from Illinois, suggests this: "Put a sales tax on now (on objects not taxed under the present bill) and use that additional money just for the aid of the unemployed." Now there is some sense to a scheme like that, for it provides where the money is coming from before it's spent. There is not a soul (unless it be a politician) that would object to paying a few cents more for an article, if he knew it was going to someone who needed it worse than him. So come on, a manufacturers' tax for the unemployed.

Yours, WILL.

Will Rogers

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

SEVERAL MONTHS before prohibition supposedly went into effect, a multi millionaire who resided in New York decided that it would be a good idea to lay in a large supply of good liquor. He had many friends and he enjoyed entertaining them. Why, he figured, should prohibition spoil his pleasure?

The millionaire went to work with a vengeance. Owner of a tremendous estate near Great Neck, he had huge vaults constructed both in and around his home. Then he cabled his agents in France and Italy and Germany, and ordered them to buy him a large amount of the finest wines and liquors that these countries produced.

The millionaire was not a young man. He was nearing 60. His wife was dead and he had two sons—one 25 and the other 22. The boys urged him not to spend too much money for liquor because it would surely go to waste eventually. But the millionaire shook his head.

"You see boys," he asserted, "I have plenty of money. You know that. Even if the cost of this liquor runs as high as a million dollars, it mean very little to me.

"I think this prohibition is going to be a serious thing. People will always want liquor and a lot of poison will probably be passed around before many years have passed.

"I want to have enough to entertain my friends in decent style as long as I live. I am having in more than enough to last me the rest of my life. I don't want to die of any poisoned liquor."

When prohibition went through the millionaire's vaults were stocked. His liquor had cost him close to the million-dollar mark, but he was contented.

"I think I have done the wise thing," he announced as he guided his friends through the vaults. "I will never have to worry about what I am drinking. I have plenty of the finest. And until the day I die I will drink nothing but the best."

Although the millionaire didn't know it that day wasn't far away. Less than three weeks after prohibition he dropped dead of heart failure.

Today, after almost 14 years, those very vaults are still loaded with liquor. And what liquor! At the time it was purchased it was the finest that money could buy. You can imagine what it is today—if it doesn't hurt you to go into that kind of imagining.

The millionaire's two sons, who inherited the entire estate, are both non-drinking men. Neither man objects to his friends drinking all they wish. But both of them feel that they are better off without drinking the stuff. And they never touch it.

They will not sell the liquor, because they feel that their father would not want them to if he were here. So they give it away. Each guest who visits the palatial home is urged to take away all he can carry. And you may be sure that the guests take advantage of the situation. Full advantage, as the saying goes.

There you have it, then. The finest liquor, unquestionably, in the entire world. The owners will not sell it and neither will they drink it. If that isn't the rankest kind of irony, I'd like to know what is . . .

IF YOU ask Jimmy Shea he will tell you the episode himself. It happened but a scant few weeks ago. And it involved a New York attorney and a little chorus girl who never rose beyond the role of a dancer in one of the minor revues.

The attorney fell in love with the kid. What is still more important, he asked her to marry him. They became engaged, and they set the date of the wedding for three months from that time.

The kid went on the road with her attraction. It was to be her farewell to the stage—and her intended husband permitted her to go. That proved conclusively just how much he knew about show business.

In her fourth week on the road the girl fell upon the stage and broke her left leg. A wire to her fiance sent him hurrying to the mid-western city where the accident had occurred. He hired a nurse and had her brought back to a New York hospital.

There he visited her twice a day. She swore that she loved him madly and it was agreed that they were to become man and wife as soon as she had completely recovered. The attorney was a happy man.

On the day the chorine was discharged from the hospital she rushed down to City Hall and married the doctor who had attended her. And then, to add insult to injury, they permitted the hospital to bill the ex-fiance for services rendered! . . .

"DEAR MR. BELLINGER," writes Anonymous. "Being an only son my mother wishes me to study music. She says that when she grows old, nothing would please her more than for me to be able to play some sort of an instrument. In this way I could make her happy in her later years.

"I tried to learn the harmonica, but I just can't master that. Then I tried the ukulele but after a few days of diligent strumming my fingers started aching. Accordingly, I gave that up also.

"Mr. Bellinger, could you recommend a school where I could learn to play the saxophone at reasonable prices?"

Even if I could, buddy, I wouldn't!

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Mme. Alla Nazimova, the Theater Guild announces, has been engaged for the important role of O-lan in "The Good Earth," the dramatization by Owen and Donald Davis of Mrs. Pearl S. Buck's novel that won the Pulitzer prize. It will be the Guild's first production of next season. Mme. Nazimova's first appearance with the Guild was in "A Month in the Country." Throughout the 1931-'32 season she has played Christine in "Mourning Becomes Electra," the Eugene O'Neill trilogy.

It is also announced by the Guild that Elisabeth Risdon has been engaged for the role of Christine in the company of "Mourning Becomes Electra" that will open in Newark October 17, on a tour that will take the trilogy to the Pacific Coast and back.

Heart Drama Is Stanley Movie

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Take that old, old triangle of two women and a man, house it magnificently, groom it exquisitely and you have "Street of Women" which is on the Stanley screen this week with Kay Francis and Allan Dinehart. A definite relationship between the designing of gowns and the building of skyscrapers is established as the motif of this nicely balanced drama of hearts.

The handsome Miss Francis is Natalie Upton fashion designer and the "other woman" in the life of Larry Baldwin, successful amateur of the latest building in the world. Roland Young, the building's architect, is an off-side player in the geometric game of human experience.

Off-shoots of the triangle are provided when Natalie's brother returns from study in Paris to fall in love with Baldwin's daughter. The young people sit in judgment on parent and sister. Mrs. Baldwin refuses to simplify matters by getting a divorce and things look pretty black.

The seige of misery is violently precipitated by an automobile accident. Things iron themselves out with the subtle assistance of that inimitable philosopher and friend, the architect.

On stage Dick Powell takes all comers on a sightseeing bus ride through Manhattan, with lively stop-overs in the Bowery, Greenwich Village and Harlem. Earl Hines broadcasting orchestra gives the last word in jazz rythm. Swor and Goode, a black-faced comedy team play a dangerous game of cards with gags and dancing antics. Jack Sidney sings an apple-man's song and Jack Lester is a fast-moving hoofer. R-D-O is for the Remarkable Dexterity displayed by Wilfred DuBois, who can balance a tennis ball on his nose, his ear, or where do you like.

'State's Attorney' Now On Davis Screen

"State's Attorney," which had been on view for a week in the Warner, moved to the Davis screen yesterday for a continuance of its run. John Barrymore, Helen Twelvetrees and William Boyd, of the stage, are featured. The film presents Barrymore as a lawyer whose profits are from crookdom and who is strictly dutiful on the side of the law when he becomes district attorney. A murder provides the climax, a sensational court trial. Miss Twelvetrees is a girl of the streets whom Barrymore befriends and Boyd is an underworld chief.

Kennywood Engages Crosley Band

The Lee Crosley Orchestra will open a week's engagement in Kennywood Park Monday. Tomorrow concerts will be played afternoon and evening by the KDKA Little German Band. The park announces that Carver's Diving Horses will be held over for another two weeks of afternoon and evening performances.

'Two Seconds' Opening In Enright

Edward G. Robinson in "Two Seconds" comes today to the Enright. The story revolves about a young structural steel worker, played by Robinson, who falls in love with a taxi dance girl, Vivienne Osborne. Guy Kibbee plays the pal of Robinson.

Mystery Film In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Warner has Warner Baxter and "Man About Town" as its current screen feature. It's a diverting film but is mistitled. You might expect to find Mr. Baxter playing around with the ladies if you go by titles. But his heart is only for one girl, Karen Morley, and the picture is essentially of the mystery type rather than an exposition of the frivols a "Man About Town" is traditionally supposed to engage in. It is dime-novelly and artificial, but, as intimated, quite interesting.

The plot is tricky and involved, with Baxter, son of one of those "first families," who has been a secret service operative of the federal government, returning to that calling after an experience as proprietor of a classy gambling place. Again a sleuth, he is assigned to a case that leads him right up to the solution of a murder mystery and the theft of a treaty, but the cause of a happy ending requires that it be recorded as one of those unanswered puzzles, and thus it is.

Baxter is O. K. as a detective—even as a gambler—although that part is not one of the strongest he has had. Conway Tearle gives excellent account of himself as Baxter's chief in service and rival for the hand of Miss Morley, who pleases in the part of member of the household of an embassy in Washington, naively subtitled "city of intrigue and mystery."

Music Composed for Warner Revue

Marjorie Alton, co-producer with Jerry Mayhall of Warner Brothers second "Pittsburgh on Parade" revue to be held Friday in the Stanley, has written all lyrics and music for the production. Heading the show will be Joe Penner, comedian, and Dick Powell, master of ceremonies. Four numbers written for the revue by Miss Alton are "Pittsburgh on Parade," "Kick Your Troubles Away," "In Your Spell" and "Tappin' to Heaven."

Swim Champ, Howard in Penn

By EDWARD W. GOSS

The Penn has two hit attractions on its bill the film, "Reserved for Ladies" with Leslie Howard and Benita Hume, and an excellent stage show entitled Dive In," starring Johnny Weissmuller.

Although "Reserved for Ladies" came to town with no thunderous broadside of ballyhoo it is an example of what producers can do when they try.

The picture does not shout its head off attempting to cram a moral down the customers' throats, neither does it struggle for a place among the heart-revealing dramas of filmdom. "Reserved for Ladies" is merely a frothy bit of comedy and love directed in a common sense manner to entertain. And entertain it does.

The story doesn't beg the audience to take it seriously. It converts a young head waiter played by Leslie Howard, who falls in love with the daughter of an American millionaire. The daughter is played by Benita Hume. The picture shows just what obstacles a serving man must overcome before winning the hand of a lady in the alleged higher social stratum.

True it is that studios have used the head waiter theme so often it has become a bit dog-eared but you forget all about that. The story seems almost new for it makes use of a little situation packing plenty laughs.

The stage show, "Dive In," compares with the film. Johnny Weissmuller demonstrates the Australian crawl. Johnny appears in a piece of leopard skin, thus making the men jealous and the women happy. The latter are given an autographed copy of Johnny's picture. The stage show also presents Jack Pepper and Madeline Berlo, in songs and dances.

The baseball world was shocked by the news that John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants for 30 years, has resigned on account of ill health, being succeeded by Bill Terry, first baseman and slugger, who was a holdout both last year and this year. McGraw's long service had made his name almost synonymous with baseball. Pictures above by Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and International News Photo Service depict the two central figures in the move to get the Giants out of the cellar.

M'GRAW'S RETIREMENT LOSS TO GAME.

MANY FANS FIND it difficult to credit the story that the withdrawal of John J. McGraw from the managership of the New York Giants was a voluntary resignation. McGraw never was the kind to quit under fire or in the face of adversity. Far from giving up when his club was losing or headed for the cellar, he usually stuck out his jaw and fought with greater determination than ever. The ill health said to have forced him out has afflicted him for two years or longer, but he always denied reports he would give up the management, saying baseball would be his business for life. And it isn't often that a man picks out 3 o'clock in the afternoon to resign from a job he has held for 30 years.

John J. McGraw

But whatever the cause of the surprising change in New York, the withdrawal of McGraw from active service is a hard blow to baseball in general and to the National League in particular. The league's only remaining graduate of baseball's old two-fisted school, he has for years been its greatest asset, and as a builder of fighting teams he gave the game color and appeal that no successor can duplicate.

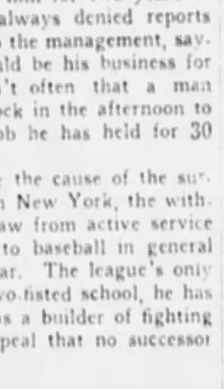
IN THE SENIOR loop the retiring Giant pilot was the last connecting link between the modern pastime and the old days of the horse-drawn bus. His name and personality created a fighting atmosphere that made every coming of the Giants to Pittsburgh and other cities a high spot in the schedule. Without McGraw the Giants won't be the Giants, and baseball won't be the same game.

The selection of Bill Terry as the new manager was almost as surprising as the retirement of McGraw. Popular guesses would have given Dave Bancroft or Freddie Lindstrom the inside track. There is never any telling what any new manager will do, and Terry may be a success, but he hasn't been the fighting type of player to offer any such promise. And there is a chance that the added responsibilities may hurt the hitting and general play of the club's most valuable member.

THERE WILL BE endless arguments as to the relative merits of Lou Gerig's four home runs in succession and the feats of the only other major leaguers who ever made four homers in one game—Bobby Lowe in 1894 and Ed Delahanty in 1896. Only Lowe, like Gehrig, made his four in consecutive times at bat.

For Gehrig it may be said that he faced the disadvantage of the foul-strike rule, which did not exist in the days of Lowe and Delahanty, but for Lowe and Delahanty there is the argument that they did their great hitting with a dead ball and before the days of small parks and restricted pitching.

LES HENRY, Los Angeles A. A. U. head and member of the American Olympic Committee, who tried vainly a year ago to induce Avery Brundage and the other athletic chiefs to center the Olympic tryouts in the West, now offers another suggestion to keep down expenses. He would appoint outright some of America's representatives and eliminate the cost of transporting them to and fro. For example, he says, why send Helene Madison, Buster Crabbe and Georgia Coleman to the swimming and diving tryouts in Cincinnati? Henry argues that they'd win even if the trials were held in Timbuctoo, and that shipping them to the tryouts and back is therefore only a waste of money.



Helene Madison

SIMILAR PROPOSALS HAVE been made before in connection with track and field stars known to be supreme in their events, sure winners no matter where the tryouts may be held. It is held that transferring them to the trials is not only an unnecessary expense, but that there is also the danger of impairing their form by too much competition and travel.

On the other hand, if the various tryouts were deprived of the drawing power of the stars whom the public wants to see in action, the preliminary meets would not take in the money that is needed to fatten the general Olympic fund. So the argument is that it's as broad as it's long.

WHEN IS AN infield fly not an infield fly? It depends not on the point to which the ball is hoisted, but on where the infielders are playing at the time. In an Eastern League game, New Haven had the bases full against Allentown with none out, when Harry Riconda hit an easy fly back of second base.

The runners on the bases held their positions. Center Fielder Patterson ran in and Second Baseman Killinger ran out at the same time to make the catch. When Patterson shouted for the ball, Kil-

M'GRAW QUITS AS MANAGER OF GIANTS

NEW YORK, June 4.—(AP.)—The "Little Napoleon" of the National League, John Joseph McGraw, has resigned as manager of the New York Giants and turned over the reins to the younger hands of Bill Terry, thereby giving the baseball world a double-barreled shock from which it will not soon recover.

Central figure in hundreds of baseball sensations, product of the days when fists and the ability to use them were necessary adjuncts to a player's equipment, McGraw, at 59, has made his exit in a fashion even more spectacular than any of the exploits that made him so feared and respected a rival.

TERRY SUCCESSOR

As if his terse announcement that ill health made it advisable for him to relinquish his managerial duties after 30 years, was not enough, he further stunned official circles by nominating Terry as his successor.

For some years it had been understood that he was grooming his first lieutenant, Dave Bancroft, for the task of carrying on with the Giants when McGraw himself should elect to step out.

Terry, on the other hand, frequently had annoyed club officials by his spring holdout activities. Only this winter, Charles A. Stoneham, Giants' president, called him a "detriment to the club."

McGraw leaves the Giants, oddly enough, just where they were when he first joined them—in last place. When he came to New York in 1902 he found the Giants in the cellar, a hopelessly disorganized outfit. Within two weeks he had cut the roster from 24 to 14 players.

When President Andrew Friedman remonstrated that he was ruining the club, McGraw tartly replied that he could finish in last place "just as

PIET'S HOMER BEATS CUBS IN ELEVENTH

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Pirates and Cubs will wind up their series at Forbes Field this afternoon, but the impending event is not nearly as gripping as the great clash of yesterday in the viewpoint of the several thousand grounups and the 1,500 lads who sat in on one of the best clashes of the season at the Oakland Orchard.

Heinie Meine will make his first start of the season today and inasmuch as Burleigh Grimes will be opposed to him, the fur should fly, but it isn't likely that the battle will produce such fireworks as those that popped yesterday when Tony Piet hit to the centerfield flagpole and then went around the sacks like Bargoo King to bring the Buccos a 6-to-5 victory in an overtime fight. Tony's stirring blow came in the home half of the eleventh.

HORNSBY FANNED

The real drama was furnished by Steve Swetonic, Rogers Hornsby, Sir William Klem and Dolly Stark, Duke of Dartmouth, in the first half of the eleventh and just at a time when the sheriff was about to levy bankruptcy proceedings against the Buccos.

The Great Rajah was at the plate, runners were on third and first, none was out, the score was tied and the inning was the eleventh. Quite a few wondered whether Hornsby would pick out any particular fence for a homer, or maybe be content to sock a triple to one of the distant fields. But Steve of the North Side slipped two strikes over on Hornsby in the crisis.

At this point Swetonic delivered a Christy Mathewson pitch which merits a few chapters when the baseball career of Stephen is penned. There are no smarter pitchers in the game than Steve and he was fully aware that only one prescription would be effective here—a low curve on the outside corner. Hornsby swung three-quarters through, tried to hold back, was called out by Sir William. The Rajah sought to have

McHale Gets Win Over Jimmy Belmont

Johnny Curtain, Pittsburgh, and Steve O'Malley, Bellaire, fought an eight-round draw. Nick Caruso, of Weirton, W. Va., won the decision over Vince Blasko, Bergholz, O., and Jimmy Shortlane, Amsterdam, O., lost to Mike Mitchell, Bellaire, O., in four-round bouts.

HORSE SHOW CLOSES TODAY

STAR HUNTERS TO BE SHOWN BY LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Parks' News-Girl and Dr. Ralph Lynch's Westmoreland Lad are expected to stage a close and brilliant fight for the John C. Oliver Memorial Challenge Cup in the Corinthian class competition open to all hunters at the Allegheny Country Club this afternoon.

This event, an annual feature of shows staged at the Sewickley Heights grounds, is expected to prove a magnet of sufficient strength to attract a record crowd for the third and final day's competition in the Allegheny County Emergency Association benefit event.

After failing to place in the touch and go sweepstakes and winning nothing better than a fourth award in the competition for local hunters yesterday, Westmoreland Lad, a consistent winner in recent years, came back to win the spectacular open jumping class competition and finish second to News-Girl in the $250 stake class hunters and jumpers feature. News-Girl captured the ta[illegible] an open jumping class e[illegible]

The competition for hunters owned by residents of Allegheny, Westmoreland and Indiana counties was won by McGoldrick from the Green Valley Stable of Mrs. R. E. Earp and Miss Alice V. Walton. Miss Nancy Louise Patterson's Prince F. won a third award in this event but captured the first prize in the competition for thoroughbred hunters up to 165 pounds.

The Hevi Pony Farms and Mrs. W. P. Roth were big winners in the events for ponies.

It was the most illuminating pitch of the year at Forbes Field as Steve extricated himself from the hole by taking the next two hitters while holding the runner on third. Then came Anthony Pietrusnka with his homer.

PIET BIG STAR

Tony the Piet made restitution and then some as he clicked with the winning homer in fact Anthony paid double indemnity for a breach of contract committed in the eighth when he ran out of his position on a hit-and-run play the slip resulting in two runs which gave the Bears an advantage of the same two tallies at this late stage. Piet singled with two out in the eighth and the bases jammed to provide the Pirates with a lead of one run. The enemy forced another deadlock in the ninth and Tony untied the knot in the eleventh.

So North Side Stevie copped his fifth victory in a row and his sixth of the season. Bob Smith and Jake May did a slick job in flipping for the Cubs. Bill Jurges rapped a homer over the left field wall in the second.

linger backed away and the sphere fell safe. Neither Umpire Tyler nor Umpire Hovater had declared an infield fly.

PATTERSON THREW THE ball to Catcher Saltzman, who touched the plate and threw to Concannon at third, and Concannon in turn threw to Shortstop Messner at second. Manager Gene Martin, of New Haven, fumed long and loudly when a triple play was allowed, claiming that the batter was out and that there could be no force play on an infield fly. The umpires remained firm in allowing a three-ply killing, however, holding that the infielders, playing in to cut off a run at the plate, didn't have a chance of making the catch. The decision was in accordance with the rule, which describes an infield fly as one "that can be handled by an infielder."

WHEN HE DEFEATED Primo Carnera in London this week, Larry Gains, Canadian Negro battler, showed that fighters in this country had made a mistake in trying to beat the Italian giant by walloping him in the body.

Gains went after Carnera's chin and that's how he defeated him. Larry had the big fellow in a bad way with shots to the jaw in the early rounds, and in the last two frames Primo was so thoroughly whipped that he took it on the run.

A RELATIONSHIP SUCH as Wilbur Wood has found existing between Kid Chocolate and his manager, Luis Guiterrez, reflecting true friendship and gratitude, is refreshing in a game that has seen all too many instances of double-crossing and promise breaking. The little Negro boxer is a standout in the matter of honor as well as in fighting ability.

Kid Chocolate

When Chocolate and Guiterrez first came to this country a few years ago and the Keed became a sensation almost overnight, fistic racketeers and chiselers tried to steal the boxer from the man who had picked him up as a newsboy in the streets of Havana. But Chocolate refused to listen to them, though he had no contract with Gutierrez. The pair finally signed one to comply with the regulations of the New York commission.

WHEN THAT CONTRACT expired about six months ago, Gutierrez made no move to have the Keed sign a new one, saying, "When he wants to leave me he is free to go." Upon their return to New York recently there was another rush by the chiselers. Gutierrez did not interfere. Again Chocolate turned a deaf ear to the tempters. The other day, Gutierrez received a note from Chocolate. In the envelope were three copies of a contract. The Keed had signed all three and left all the other dotted lines blank. "I am tired of being bothered by managers who want me to sign with them," wrote the little boxer in substance. "You know, as I do, that no contract is needed between us. As long as I am a boxer I never will go with any other manager. But to save trouble, I think we'd better sign a contract. I have signed my name and left the rest of the contract for you to fill out as you see fit."

PIET'S WINNING HOMER

The Pirates defeated the Cubs in 11 innings on Piet's home run at Forbes Field yesterday, as children were admitted free for the first time. Lower Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture shows Piet sliding home on his hit.

Within two years he had developed a team that in 30 years was to win for him 10 National League pennants and three world series, finish second 10 times and wind up in the second division only twice.

His decision to resign came after he had been advised that he could not make any further road trips with the Giants this season. Although giving up his manager's post McGraw will continue to be associated with the club in his capacity as vice president and a large stockholder.

SCHOOL NINES WIN CROWNS

Allegheny, Carnegie and Gladstone captured scholastic baseball titles yesterday in three sections of competition.

Allegheny, limited to a single hit by Del Savio, Westinghouse hurler, took advantage of Westinghouse errors and Del Savio's wildness to beat the Silver Lakers, 5 to 2, in the second and final game of the annual City League title series. The game was played at Greenlee Field. Connelley, Westinghouse outfielder, hit a triple and a double as part of his team's fruitless four-hit attack. Napier, Allegheny hurler, got his team's lone hit, a single in the first inning.

At Forbes Field, Carnegie High defeated Ambridge, 9 to 1, to win the W. P. I. A. L. championship, replacing McKeesport, which team it eliminated in a preliminary round fracas. Klim, Carnegie hurler, kept Ambridge's six hits well scattered.

Gladstone won the city junior title by defeating Herron Hill in the third and deciding game of the series, 4 to 3.

The Horace Mann School track and field team won the high point honors in the fifth of a series of six grade school meets staged by the department of hygiene of the public schools yesterday at Oliver Field, with 74 points.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Pittsburgh will be host to two more world boxing champions next week, Midget Wolgast, the flyweight titleholder, and Maxie Rosenbloom, the light-heavyweight champion, but it is doubtful if their bouts hold the appeal of the return of Jack Kilbourne, rangy California and Chicago middleweight, who meets Angel Cliville, the Porto Rican Negro, in one of the added attractions at the Meyers Bowl, Monday night . . . Kilbourne took the fans by storm by the manner in which he disposed of Harry Harris, hard-hitter from Bellaire, O., in a six-round special bout, following the Tony Canzoneri-Battling Gizzy opening feature at the Bowl week before last.

Kilbourne, built along the spindly lines of Bob Fitzsimmons, has a style all his own . . . He did little more than reach out and smother Harris' punches for more than half of the first round and then dropped in a right to the jaw that laid out Harris cold for many times the full count . . . In meeting Cliville, he faces another tough puncher, who in his only showing here so far stopped Tiger Joe West at the Kapphan Arena . . . Kilbourne took the Harris match for a mere $100 to break in here . . . For boxing Cliville he is being guaranteed $700 on a card of four 10-rounders.

The feature of Kilbourne's work that is apt to be overlooked by the fans in the light of his great punching—and they wonder where he gets the sock with his spare frame—is the fact that he is a great boxer, possessing the knack of catching his opponent's leads on his own gloves before they start . . . Jack Johnson had that trick down to a science . . . Kilbourne is cool in action and impresses the idea that fighting is no effort at all for him . . . He recently returned from Australia, where he compiled a neat record . . . Since getting back to the States he has had eight fights, half of them against light-heavyweights and heavyweights, although he is a natural 160-pounder . . . He knocked out Haakon Hansen, Harris and Ray Trambie and defeated on points Roy Williams, Harry Fuller, Buck Everett and Martin Levandowski, while he lost a decision to Dave Shade on the latter's experience.

JACK KILBOURNE

Lovers of the outdoors plan to observe the two hundred and fiftieth anniversay next year of the death of Izaak Walton, their patron saint, who lived to the age of 90 and has had millions of followers since he died in 1683 . . . His classic work of literature, "The Compleat Angler," ran through five editions during his lifetime . . . One of the laughs of the year is the fact that Larry Gains, Toronto Negro heavyweight, conceded 68 pounds and a lot of height and reach to the giant Primo Carnera and handed him a drubbing in London the other night, just at a time when the English were talking about barring matches in which Carnera is pitted against small opponents . . . Our Pirates head East for their first invasion of that sector this year after today's game . . . Wouldn't it be funny if they should be fighting for the lead in the wide open race when they return?—HARRY KECK.

FREEMAN GETS VICTORY OVER M'TIERNAN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, who looked so good in his comeback bout against Jack Wilson at Hickey Park a few weeks ago, turned in a complete reversal of form last night, as he lost every one of 10 rounds to Tommy Freeman, of Cleveland, former welterweight champion, in the same ring. A year ago in the Meyers Bowl Freeman won a referee's decision over Buck in a bout in which the local man really had an edge. Last night the battle wasn't even close.

McTiernan lacked the drive that had characterized his work against Wilson, was a total loss in the clinches, where Freeman beat a tattoo upon his head and body, and found himself outboxed and outpunched round after round. A right to the jaw dropped him and he took a count of nine in the eighth round.

EYES ARE CUT

It was a good fight for action, with both punching hard, but with Freeman always in command of the situation. Tommy really fought a surprising battle while McTiernan was far below his stride of the Wilson fight. Buck weighed 156½ pounds and Freeman 158.

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, outslugged Red Artis, of Fairchance, in the six-round semi-final, put on after the main bout. Johnny Hazel, of Hazelwood, outclassed Chink Rosanna, of Uniontown, making his professional debut, and the referee halted the bout after 1 minute 37 seconds of the fifth round to save Rosanna.

WATSON BEATS JONES

Bearcat Jones, Hill Negro middleweight, dropped Jack Watson, of Erie, twice in the first round, but Watson came on to beat him. Bobby Rowe, of the East End, won by a technical knockout over Jimmy White, of the Hill, also starting out as a pro in the third round of the scheduled four-round opener.

The crowd was only fair in size. Paulie Walker, of New York, and Davy Grove, of the North Side, were announced as the finalists for next Thursday night.

Fight Results

At Hickey Park, Millvale—Tommy Freeman defeated Buck McTiernan, 10 rounds. Young Rudy defeated Red Artis, 6 rounds. Johnny Hazel won by technical knockout over Chink Rosanna, 5 rounds. Jack Watson defeated Bearcat Jones, 4 rounds. Bobby Rowe won by technical knockout over Jimmy White, 3 rounds.

At Bellaire—Point O. Win—King Tut knocked out Frankie Burns, 3 rounds. Frank Kinkoff defeated Ted Angers, 6 rounds.

At Steubenville—Marty Millaie defeated Jimmy Belmont, 10 rounds. Johnny Curry and Steve O'Malley drew, 4 rounds. Sonny Carbone defeated Vince Blanco, 4 rounds. Mae Mitchell defeated Jimmy Shepherd, 4 rounds.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

BOSTON, June 4.—Well, those Athletics finally came out of their cocoons and are flying in the right direction now. In one of his essays, a month ago, Uncle Nick warned his constituents that, no matter how close the A's lingered to the basement, they were still a pent-house team.

Nick Altrock

And I finally doped out the mystery of Jimmy Foxx's last name. Those two X's in his monicker stand for the kisses he is giving the baseball these days.

I see Umpire George Moriarty broke his hand punching a Chicago player's chin. From the way they are playing baseball, Moriarty would have crashed his whole arm to a pulp if he'd aimed at a White Sox skull.

GEHRIG TIES HOMER MARK

Associated Press.

Lou Gehrig, long accustomed to play second fiddle to Babe Ruth, today had carved himself a place in baseball's permanent record, the result of a home run spree never equaled by his illustrious teammate or by any other big league batsman in the last 33 years.

The Yankee first baseman yesterday crashed four consecutive homers at Shibe Park as his team walloped the Athletics, 20 to 13.

Only once before had the feat been equaled. Robert Lowe, of the Boston Nationals of 1894, did it. Ed Delehanty, of Philadelphia, hit four in one game in 1896, but only three were consecutive.

Gehrig's record was not the only one to fall in the wild melee. The Yankees piled up a total of 50 bases on 23 hits and the two clubs had a combined total of 77 bases. The Yanks also equaled the big league record for home runs in a single game, with seven.

The Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns battled 10 innings before Goose Goslin cracked a home run that gave the Browns a 2-to-1 victory. Cleveland beat the Tigers twice, 3 to 1 and 10 to 7.

Girls Who Go With Married Men Invite Unhappiness

Should a wife give her husband a divorce, if he loves someone else, or should she hang onto him, whether he wants her or not?

And if you were the girl in such a case, what would you do if the wife refused to let him go?

Would you break off with him, and reorganize your life, or would you hang on—seeing him, in spite of the barrier between you—messing up your life with a hope that may never come true?

Sounds like easy answering, doesn't it? But wait! There is a trick to the story. Maybe a couple of tricks.

"Dear Sally:

"I wonder if you can't help me, or us, rather.

"I am a single girl of 22 and I am in love with a married man. Now I know what you and the readers of your column will say, but please don't hand out the raps until you have read my story, because it is a little different from most of them.

"The man in the case is 35. He has never lived with his wife since they were married. When he was a kid he got in a scrape, and married her to give his child a name. The wife has the baby, now a little over two years old. He pays for its support, and always intends to.

"He has told me he doesn't care for his wife at all, and has asked for a divorce, but she won't give him one.

"We want to get married and I am willing to take his baby if she will give it up. Of course, if she insisted on keeping it, he would continue paying for its support, but we would like very much to have it.

WANT TO MARRY

"I have been going with him for 16 months, and everything has been above board with us. It is not the usual case of a married man 'slinging a line.' We really love each other deeply and want to marry and have a little home together.

"This woman knows that her husband goes out with other girls, but she doesn't know who. She also goes out with other men. But she seems too stubborn to give him up. He has told me that he knows that she doesn't give the child the proper care, or buy the clothes it should have.

"What shall we do? Shall I keep on going with him, hoping that things will straighten out in time? It seems hopeless keeping on, with nothing definite in the future to look forward to. Please help us. I will be looking for your answer.

RITA

DOUBTS HIS STORY

What'll you do?

Think it over for yourself, my dear. If you do keep on under present circumstances, where are you heading? Nowhere—except to misery and a wasted life.

If this man can't, or won't, get a divorce, cut him out.

And as a matter of fact, if he really loves you as much as he says he does, he'd find a way to get it. And what, exactly, is keeping him from getting it now—if not in this state, then in another.

Since he and his wife have never lived together, and she, as well as he, goes out with others, why must he remain bound? Maybe you believe that story, but, frankly, sister, I don't. It sounds fishy to me, and I'd put it up to him straight, to either get himself clear, or get out of your life and give you a chance to find real happiness.

I'd put it up to him and then I'd stop seeing him until he is honestly a free man.

That is my advice to Rita. What's yours, Stranger?

THE DARK SIDE AND THE FAIR SIDE -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

I wonder if Eve was a blonde? I wonder if Helen of Troy was really fair? I wonder which deep-burrowing histories of Cleopatra, the pint-size temptress of the Nile, are right—those who tell us she had red hair, or those that say it was black as the darkest night itself? I wonder of what color was the hair of the Sirens on the rocks. Was Circe's hair black as sorrow, copper as an autumn sun burning at his setting, or gold as a wheat field under the sun? Of what shade was Venus' hair? We see her only in white marble and must give her the color we like the best. Was Dante's Beatrice blonde or brunette? Maybe you have read all of Dante Alighieri—and know. I never have gotten so far.

All this wonderment because of a letter. A letter with no name signed. Anonymous letters never seem to summon the courage to stand out in the light with a name to them, if their language gives way to discourtesy, coarseness, or worse. This was only a piteous letter after all, but it fairly bowled a fellow over with the intensity of its fury. Because, somehow, the writer of the letter, a letter perfumed with jasmine, but not with feminine words! had a fixed idea that the "sketch-artist" of these pictures had no love for brunettes! "YOU must be a blonde yourself!" was the lest offensive phrase.

How right she was! So I am. I thought, poor hard-working limner, that I had made some pretty chic brunettes in my life. They always look prettier to me when they are finished than my blondes.

However, I will tell Anonymous a secret. Half the time the girls I make turn out blondes because the edition is going to press, the deadline is near, and it takes longer to "INK IN" black hair than it does to curly-cue in the fair. Sometimes if I had had 15 more minutes to polish off my masterpiece—the girl you see a blonde would have been a brunette!

I like brunettes. I like brownettes. I like blondes. And dark eyes are my weakness—special! The prettiest woman I ever knew when I was a child had eyes and hair the color of coffee in the sun—my mother, that was. And is. And I consider if I had been lucky enough to have been handed down her eyes and hair, I would have been a menace instead of a mouse.

Surely this battle has been fresh since the days of Eve. That is, after the first woman besides herself came along. Which has the most desirable and adorable qualities—the BLONDE, or the BRUNETTE? When you ask that privately or in print you have indeed kicked up a dust!

Who can say? The man that loves a woman thinks her the most characterful, the sweetest, whichever she is. The Madonna is always painted and drawn, a type with soft dark hair. The dazzler as a glittering blonde. Yet there have been the most devoted of mothers among fair women, and the deadliest of temptresses among the dark. We would be foolish to try to prove anything else.

The most faithful? That's a favorite bone to go in a huddle over. The most faithful? I've seen frivolity and lack of loyalty in each or either. And devotion-to-death in both. A man once was disillusioned by a woman with golden hair, and he has been on the dark side of the fence ever since. Another lost a dream through a dark Rosaleen's blameless inability to live up to his idea for her, and though it's years ago, he is on the fair side for good.

I think they're both distracting. But one thing I know, and it is offered in the way of a hint. A blonde should never get "good and mad." She can't do it, and still be beautiful. But a brunette! Heigh-ho. She can burn with rage and be the more beautiful doing so.

Correct Manners

Tea for Callers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As I am going to move to another town I would appreciate your advice as to what is the proper procedure if and when the women should call. Does one serve tea and if so, what would you advise? W.

I'd love to urge you, when you do move to your own home, to make a feature every day of serving tea or at least of having it ready to serve, when your new neighbors come to pay their visits of welcome. There are very few things that you can do that will give your home such an aura of hospitality, or you a reputation of being a delightful hostess, and for so small an amount of trouble and budgeting.

Take a few minutes from each day to make your tea-table made ready, your silver polished, and all accessories ready. Make a list of things that might be your specialties for serving with tea, on your supply shelf pastes and other sandwich-makings, or English muffins to be toasted and served with delicious strawberry jam or other kind of jam, or a jar of cinnamon to be sprinkled on slim fingers of toast, or any other tea accessory that can be held over to a following day if it is not used today.

Plan for an early tea-hour, 4 o'clock, for often, indeed usually, welcoming calls are made at about this hour.

Returning the Call

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly let me know the broadest courtesy which may be applied to one coming to a new country estate section. When socially prominent neighbors call in your absence and leave their cards, is it going too far to communicate with them by writing or telephoning in acknowledgment of their cards, and would it be going too far before they call again, to make a visit yourself in the absence of a formal introduction?

AN ADMIRING READER.

These kind visits-of-welcome should be returned by your going to the homes of each neighbor who called on you, and leaving your cards, in return compliment. The calls should not be acknowledged by writing or by telephoning, but by the leaving of cards.

Later, when several or many calls have been made on you, and you have become more a part of the community-life, by going to parties and so forth, you might plan to have several of these new friends to tea, and then arrange to have them dine at your home.

Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Close Work

Z passed. A's hand counts sufficiently high in probable tricks to justify an opening bid of two, under the official system, but its definite tricks are insufficient for even a semi-demand bid. A made an opening bid of only 1-Spade. Y was too pleased with the declaration to wish to say anything except pass. B bid 2-Diamonds, hoping that his partner could support or shift to something besides spades. Z passed. A shifted into 2-Hearts, which B jumped to 4-Hearts.

The opening lead was the Q of clubs. Preferring that lead to any other, Z played his 8 as an encouragement card, and A let the Q hold the trick. Y led his J, removing the last club from dummy; Z overplayed with his K; A's Ace won the trick. Dummy trumped a third lead of clubs, giving the declarer his second trick.

The fourth lead was dummy's lone spade. Y's Ace won the trick from A's J. Y could not lead a trump without losing his K, nor could he lead another club without letting dummy trump so Y led his K of diamonds. B's Ace won the trick. The return lead was the 5 of hearts. The declarer's 9 was finessed; Y's K won the third trick for the defenders. To fulfill his contract A had to win the seven remaining tricks.

Y had to choose between his good diamond, on the chance that A might have another card of that suit, or of leading a trump, to cut down B's ability to ruff spades. Y decided that in case A held another diamond he would have to lose a trick later, and that he should now lead a trump. He did this, leaving only a single trump in dummy. A won the trick with his Q, and returned his lowest spade for dummy to trump.

The only return lead that could be made from dummy was a diamond. A trumped with his 6, winning his sixth trick. The seventh trick was won with the Ace of trumps, pulling the last opposing heart. As yet A was not certain that his K-Q-8 of spades were all good. There were held against him the 10-9-5, which might all lie in one hand. If that were so he must go down one trick. When he led his K and both Y and Z followed suit, A spread his hand, claiming "balance."

Many players are afraid to show a suit of only four cards secondarily. The old-fashioned way of bidding A's hand would have been to have first shown the four-card heart suit, and then to have bid the longer spade suit for the higher declaration. The modern method of contracting is to first show the longer of two suits, so that your partner may realize that the higher ranking suit, if shown first, must be at least as long as the suit next shown.

Madge Persuades Dicky to Withdraw "Ultimatum"

Dicky finished his tirade against Philip Veritzen with a savage little click of his teeth, and then began tramping up and down the room as he does when he is angered or excited. He was still muttering anathemas under his breath, and I wondered—as a wife sometimes does, I imagine—why upon this particular occasion I had not followed that hoary old maxim, of no ethics, doubtful efficacy, but occasional value: "What he doesn't know won't hurt him."

In what troublesome complications had I not involved myself? I asked myself miserably, as I watched Dicky pacing the the room. If I had not told him of Philip Veritzen's threat not to produce my play unless I agreed to go into the city upon the following Tuesday, Dicky never would have issued the ultimatum that he had just uttered—that he, himself, would take the play away from the great producer. I had only one hope. If I could get Dicky to laugh, my battle was won. I caught at the last sentence he had uttered and repeated it.

"In your own phraseology, darling," I said, catching his eye, as he wheeled from the corner of the room, and smiling at him, "I've beaten you to that particular stunt. I've already shown he's not the only candle on the birthday cake and I've trimmed the candle. That's what I started to tell you. If you'll stop raging up and down like an angry lion and come over here and sit down again, I'll chant my own little saga of triumph."

Dicky stopped short in his pacing and stared at me.

"That's right!" he said. "I have not given you a chance to spill all your dope yet. Go ahead. I'll promise to keep quiet until you finish."

MADGE EXPLAINS

He sat down on the arm of my chair again and I struck into brisk apparently, unruffled speech, although I was distinctly shaky inside.

"There isn't very much to tell," I said, "except that when I had told Mr. Veritzen that it would be impossible for me to go in next Tuesday, that I must wait to begin work upon the casting and production until after school opened, he said, 'Suppose that I tell you that I must return your drama to you unless you can come into the city next Tuesday.'"

I stopped for breath and Dicky's face darkened again.

"I wish I'd been listening in," he growled.

"I wish so, too," I said, in my airiest manner, "just to hear what I told him."

"Well! You're not working up any suspense for a third-act climax or the ending of a serial installment," he said with heavy irony in his voice, "so hurry up Mistah Bones, and tell us what you said to him."

He was coming out of his tantrum! I knew that by his lightened tone and his reference to the minstrel show. I had won out and my heart was jubilant as I told him what he wished to know.

"I'll tell you the exact phraseology I used," I said, "here it is:

"'Then I would have no other recourse but to turn my play over to a theatrical agent and hope for the impossible to happen.'"

Dicky seized my shoulders and held me off, looking into my face with open admiration.

"Bravo! Bravura!" he exclaimed. "I didn't think you had it in you. And what did he have to say to that?"

NO ULTIMATUM

Prudently, I did not reproduce the tender patronizing accents and terms in which Mr. Veritzen had couched his answer.

"Oh," I chuckled reminiscently, "he was very clever. He took refuge in the loftily paternal pose. He said that I was a bad child and that he and everybody else had spoiled me, but that I evidently was one of the people who worked best when being humored; and that, therefore, he was going to let me have my own way and come into the city when I chose. I felt very much thrilled at having won out so signally."

"And well you might," Dicky said, then added dryly, "and you needn't tell me all the rest that he said because I probably should bite chunks out of the atmosphere if I heard it. I'm just commenting upon it so that you will know I'm hep to the old lad. Philip Veritzen never lets a chance go like that for pulling some highly dramatic lines and business. But you don't want to repeat them, for which I can't blame you, and I certainly don't want to hear 'em."

"Then we both are suited," I said audaciously, "and the best of it all is that you won't have to issue any ultimatum to Mr. Veritzen for he already has been ultimatumed——"

"All over the lot," Dicky finished with a grin. "No, I'll keep my forefeet out of this particular trough, but more power to you! You'll need it, in dealing with Philip Veritzen. Hello! here comes Harry. What's on your mind, Old Timer? Snooping around to get the low down on the play, n'est-ce pas, nicht wahr? or what have you?"

"Partly," Mr. Underwood replied, "but the rest can wait. Let's hear about the play."

An odd little intonation in his voice made me realize that the thing he had left unuttered was of far more importance than his really genuine interest in the fate of my play.

Finger Marks

If the housewife will remove the finger marks from the paint each week during the cleaning her woodwork will always appear clean and fresh. It only means a minute's work and those finger marks are such give-aways!

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Keep Your Tonsils If They Are Not Infected

Infected and enlarged tonsils are injurious to the health. If actually diseased the tonsils should be removed, as they may be responsible for many ailments.

Dr. Copeland

Normally the tonsil is about the size and shape of an almond. In Tonsilitis, or inflammation of the tonsil, it becomes swollen, enlarged and painful. The throat is very sore, swallowing is difficult and there is high fever. If you have ever suffered from tonsilitis you can appreciate how sick that disease can make you. The attack subsides, but usually recurs unless the tonsils are removed.

Other glandular tissue similar in structure to the tonsil is found in back of the throat. This is the pharyngeal tonsil, and when it becomes diseased and enlarged the child has what we call adenoids. Its breathing is difficult and its hearing may be impaired. This trouble is rarely, if ever, seen in adults, but it is quite common in children.

Usually abnormalities of the tonsils and adenoids are associated, and in case of operation both are removed at the same time.

But I do not believe that tonsils should be removed unless they are infected as well as enlarged. In health these glands help the body ward off disease, while if infected they are a menace to health. Infected tonsils are a possible cause of chronic rheumatism, kidney disease, heart disease and other infections within the body. The dangers associated with disease of the tonsils are great and should not be treated lightly.

Many adults suffer from diseased tonsils who have been advised to have them removed but have neglected to do so. Too little emphasis is placed upon the significance of diseased tonsils in adults and the need of attention.

It is now possible to have tonsils removed without a cutting operation, but by a procedure that is used only for adults. It is not advised for children. This treatment consists of application of a special electric current to the diseased tonsils, continued until the tonsils are destroyed.

The advantages in this form of treatment are that the patient can continue work without interruption, while the tonsils are removed without shock, pain or danger of hemorrhage. This will appeal to many who have feared operation.

Your physician should decide which treatment is best for you; but please remember that diseased tonsils may create a serious condition, and do not neglect them.

Answers to Health Queries

M. P. R. Q.—I have been troubled with a pain in my hip joint. Could this be rheumatism?

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Swim! Nothing like it to develop chest and bust—and the normal figure requires chestiness. Swimming brings the feminine shape to normal, taking off excess hippage and spread, putting on curves where curves should be. It is the perfect, ideal exercise and beauty help.

Verbena perfume is sweet and refreshing. A simple one can be compounded by mixing together 30 drops of oil of orange, 10 fluid ounces of spirit of lemon, 6 fluid ounces of spirit of lemon grass. Not a drop of verbena in it, but that means nothing. The effect is that of the fragrance of the little garden bloom.

POLISH COUNCIL BACKS JOB LOAN

PROJECTS IN PA. FACE SLASH

Appeal for the right to work rather than receive charity was made today by the Central Council of Polish Organizations of Pittsburgh in indorsing the proposed $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Bond which would create employment through the construction of necessary public works.

The organization, representing 20,000 members in the Pittsburgh district, who compose 21 associations grouped in the Council, stressed the physical suffering of the unemployed as creating the necessity for federal aid. Copies of a memorial are being sent to Secretary F. T. Matusszeski, to Congressmen.

Citing the financial loss to business and industry through the lack of the people's purchasing power, the memorial said:

"The privations and sufferings of the unemployed are even a greater loss in the light of waning morale and physical ills, despite efforts of organized society to render relief through funds now nearing exhaustion."

Elder Dr. Poling To Be Evangelist

PORTLAND, Ore., June 4 (AP).—The Rev. Dr. C. C. Poling, 74, for 53 years a Methodist minister, will step from the pulpit of the First Evangelical Church in Salem, Ore., Sunday to become a traveling evangelist. He is the father of Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York, editor of the Christian Herald and international president of Christian Endeavor.

East Pittsburgh Schools Picnic

The annual outing of the East Pittsburgh schools is being held at Kennywood Park today with C. F. Young and Thomas F. Hampton, of the committee in charge of the program. The day's diversions included swimming and dancing.

Movie Test to Give 148 Share in $2,500

First Award in New Film Game to Be $500.

Making "both ends meet" will not be such a hard problem for at least 148 readers of the Sun-Telegraph who will eventually be awarded this number of prizes in the new Movie Lovers contest to begin next Monday. The total amount of money to be given away in this contest is $2,500, with an opportunity to win as high as $500 in one award. Then there are prizes as high as $250, $175, $125, $100, three at $75, seven at $50, ten at $25, ten at $15 and so on until the entire $2,500 is paid out.

The winning of one of these big cash prizes will take a wallop at depression and this opportunity is offered to every man and woman, boy and girl, living in Pittsburgh or within 100 miles of Pittsburgh. Aside of the possibilities of winning these big cash rewards this contest also offers an opportunity for fascinating summertime fun and recreation.

The Movie Lovers contest will consist of a series of puzzle pictures for which readers of the Sun-Telegraph are to hunt the correct titles. This will be comparatively easy because a list of titles will appear with every picture and the correct title of each picture will be included in the list printed on the same day that the picture appears. Everybody is familiar with movie titles, yet they do not necessarily have to be to participate in this test.

Readers who want to enter in this $2,500 cash prize contest, however, must file a registration blank. Readers will find this blank on another page of today's Sun-Telegraph. Clip or copy it, fill in the requirements, mail the blank and then start on your road to fortune next Monday.

REVOLT FLARES IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 4.—(INS.)—With the backing of the Chilean air force, Col. Marmaduke Grove, stormy petrel of Chilean politics, today proclaimed a revolt against the government. Martial law was declared immediately.

Government troops surrounded the rebel airmen in their barracks near Santiago. Some doubt was expressed over the government's ability to cope with the uprising as other sections of the military, in addition to the air forces, are reported to be in sympathy with Grove.

As proof of his determination to carry through the revolt, Grove, commodore of the air force, arrested Ramon Vergara, a government delegate. He was imprisoned in the air force barracks.

Grove issued a manifesto calling upon the people to support a socialistic government. He defied a government ultimatum demanding his immediate and unconditional surrender.

MORE THAN LOVE

Story of Love and Romance Complete in Six Installments

By LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

CHAPTER IV

The stranger looked keenly at Leland as he stepped out of the door and closed it behind him. Then he grinned.

Leland did not miss the grin. The man felt rather sure of himself, Leland decided.

In a flash Leland had his tipoff as to what to do.

"Howdy," Leland said, what brought sore business he stranger?"

"What's that?" he demanded sharply.

Leland realized that the man was surprised and puzzled at this.

"Who are you-all and what you-all want?" Leland demanded, with the nasal twang of the mountaineers. We don't set no store by furriners down in these parts."

"No offense," he said.

"What is it you-all seeks?" Leland persisted, getting courage now at the success of his ruse and scowling at the man.

WARNS NEIGHBORS

Leland did not believe the man's story that he was prospecting for coal, not only because he had all the ear-marks of a detective, but because he should have known that the nearest coal was either at Radford or Ivanoe Furnace, towns seventy-five miles apart and equally as far from Grayson Hills.

"Sorry," the man said and he swung into his saddle and rode away.

Leland went inside and told his sister to keep hidden as he was going to tell Harvey Orson. He cut up through the woods and told him about it.

"I think he's a revenuer and I wanted to warn you, and anyway you know I don't want strangers down here."

"I'll be right pert in seein' about it, Mister Fo'bes," Harvey Orson promised. Leland smiled grimly. Whoever the man was, Orson and his neighbors would send him on his way. If the man was a detective his badge would work him more harm than good for to these people a badge is the sign of but one thing, a revenue officer—and a revenue officer in those parts held down a very unhealthy job.

Lola was almost sick over the fright. To her there still lurked the grim shadow of the electric chair. The fear of capture had never quite left her.

Leland's mind was often in a turmoil. He would have spells of thinking of Jeanette, of trying to plan some means of letting her know that he was alive and loved her, but no plan would come to him that didn't carry with it too great a degree of danger, according to his views.

JEANETTE SUFFERS

Much as he longed to secure copies of newspapers that carried the story of the shooting of Vance Harlow, he never dared to send for them or even ask his friend and lawyer to do that, for he didn't want him to suspect that his sister was with him.

Poor Jeanette! When proofs of the material that Leland had sent, in his roundabout way, to the Maxin and Company house were given to her to illustrate, she always had a day or so of suffering, mental agony. These proofs meant that somewhere Leland was alive, and there was something direful in his hiding. But Jeanette was no fictional heroine to faint and droop and pine away. She finally went on with her work.

When the first volume came to Leland—the first since he had gone into hiding and had used the pen name of Paul Justine—his sister saw that he was in great distress.

She did not suspect that it was over the handsome illustrations because he knew that Jeanette had made them. She thought it was because he had to use a false name on his work.

"Leland, I'm miserable over your sacrifice," she told him, one day. "I cannot let it go on."

"Everything is serene. When Sunny is about five we'll get out of here and settle in some little Italian town, don't worry," he would say.

"But it is all because I was such a blind fool. I knew that you never liked—the man I married. I knew when you warned me, that you were sincere, but I was in love—or I thought that I was and because I let my heart run away with my head I have ruined my life and yours."

"Hush, there is no question of my duty to my sister. We all err at times—I'll see you through," he would scold at her in his mild way.

UNHAPPY NIGHTS

He would have been surprised and miserable if he had known of the many nights she wept because of this thing—and not a tear was for the dead Vance Harlow. To her the tragedy was that she had ruined her beloved brother's career and had upon her soul the horrible knowledge that she had killed her son's father.

What if little Leland should learn the truth in after years? He would never quite know the circumstances.

She talked to Leland about this now and then, making sure that the little boy was asleep, for he was beginning to understand words and even at this tender age something might cling to his memory.

Over and over, with great patience, for he knew how she was suffering, Leland pointed out to his sister that once in Italy they would adopt new names and the little boy would never know.

Jeanette, miserable yet brave, again went down to Wytheville and out to the beautiful home that belonged to Leland. Old black Mose and Violet welcomed her.

She remained there for weeks, making photographs of birds and also making her colored crayonings for the colored book plates. Day after day she would go over some of the territory where she and Leland had wandered, and she had to fight to keep from running away. She stayed on, telling herself that it was because of the abundance of birds for her to photograph, but in reality it was because she had a constant hope that some day Leland would come back—back here to this little home he loved so well.

And if he did come, she told herself, she would go to him and comfort him and never ask him a question.

ATTORNEY VISITS

One day a cleancut appearing man drove up to the place in an expensive car. Jeanette was on the west porch, her easel set up, busily at work coloring some drawings of birds. These had to be rushed up to the publishing house.

Old Mose went down to see him as he came up the walk. He caught sight of Jeanette and, hat in hand, he approached her.

"Are you Miss Morse?" he asked.

"Why, yes, how did you know? You-all must know something of Leland—of Mr. Forbes?"

Jeanette's heart beat rapidly.

"Yes, I know him."

"I have every right to know about him—where is he? I knew that if you knew my name you knew him."

"I do not know where he is, Miss Morse. I used to be his lawyer. I was driving through and decided to come and question the colored people who are the keepers."

He handed her his card.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said imploringly, "you must tell me where Leland is. It doesn't matter what he has done. I must go to him. I can help him. I have implicit faith in him."

"I cannot tell you. I am searching for him myself."

Adams was doing what he thought was right following orders, but he was secretly sorry and also angry at Leland for forcing him into this situation.

FOLLOWS CLUE

Jeanette did not know whether to believe him or not, but she decided that it would be useless to let him think that she distrusted him.

Adams remained over-night. He went through some of Leland's papers. This was necessary in the handling of Leland's affairs. It made Jeanette more suspicious than ever.

"Well," he said, the next afternoon as he prepared to leave, "I have been through everything. I know no more about it now than I did before."

Jeanette was convinced then that Adams was telling the truth and was there solely to look for clues as to Leland's whereabouts.

But after he had gone she found in the library, a great folio that had been taken down and left open. It was open at a map of Grayson County, a county that adjoins Wythe County.

Could it mean anything?

Jeanette began to make veiled inquiries about Grayson County whenever she was in the town shopping or at the postoffice mailing her material.

Williams, the station master at the railroad station, told her considerable about Grayson County.

"It's mostly hills and woods and mountaineers, Miss," he said. "They make the best moonshine in the state up there and they can hide out so's no revenuer can git 'em. They come into town often, especially in the fall, selling a bag of chestnuts for $5 and inside the chestnuts is a gallon of fine moonshine."

Jeanette was unusually interested. If the Grayson Hills in Grayson County provided a perfect hiding place for moonshiners, why not for Leland?

She knew that he was acquainted all through this district. When they had been up at Chimney Rocks that memorable day Leland proposed, he had pointed out the heavily wooded, deep-valleyed Grayson Hills and told her of his friends there, the mountaineers.

There was, she learned, a prosperous farmer, a Dutchman, near the station of Crocketts. His name was Baumgartener. He had a sort of public inn in connection with his farm.

Jeanette decided that there was nothing to lose in making a try. She could always be photographing birds and keeping on with her work. She packed her little car with many supplies and drove up to Crocketts. She found the farm and was taken in and given a rather good room.

Day after day she drove her little car here and there into the mountain roads. Several times she was lost or belated and the mountaineers would put her up.

But they never said a word to her of knowing a man who wrote about birds, or that such a man was hiding there, although she always explained that she was photographing birds.

"Mr. Adams," Jeanette said, "you must tell me where Leland is."

At one place an old crone by the fireplace smoking her pipe, upon being told that the girl was taking pitches of chickadee birds, showed interest.

"You-all furriners set a store on birds, I take it," she said.

FINDS LELAND

She could get no more information but she became hopeful.

Often she would ask, "I suppose plenty of strangers come here to study the song birds?"

One day Jeanette got to the top of a wooded knoll and her car could get no further. She took her camera and walked down a trail to a small house.

A baby boy was toddling about inside a little yard. And then a man came out of the house. Jeanette stared at him.

"Leland!" she cried.

He had just lifted the baby out of the little yard. He wheeled and stared at Jeanette and almost dropped the baby. Lola had followed him out and saw Jeanette.

"Take Leland," he said handing over the baby to Lola.

"Mamma? Leland? Is she—" Jeanette hesitated.

In a flash Lola felt that this girl had some claim on her brother, she saw it in his eyes, in the face of Jeanette.

"No, no," Lola said, excitedly and eager to explain, "we are not married!"

"Hush, Lola," Leland said and started toward Jeanette.

But after one gasp at Lola's words she turned and ran.

Leland hurried after her, but she raced over the knoll, got into her car, turned it and drove away before he could overtake her. His pleading shouts for her to wait only spurred her to make more speed.

Faith Baldwin's novels, often printed in these columns, are always welcome to lovers of fine fiction. Next Wednesday the first instalment of her newest serial—"Skyscraper"—will appear in the Sun-Telegraph. This is a thrilling story of love on the 50-th floor—of big business, adventure, ambition and the battles of wits day after day in the world's tallest building. Don't miss the first instalment of "Skyscraper" next Wednesday.

Synopsis

Leland Forbes had never met Jeanette Morse until they accidentally become acquainted in Virginia. They promptly fall in love with each other and plan an early marriage. In their short courtship Leland has not mentioned his sister, Lola, who is his twin and the only other one of his family left. She has a baby boy and and is married to Vance Harlow, a worthless brute. She suddenly comes to Leland a few days before his planned marriage, begging him to hide her as she has killed her husband. With no witnesses and knowing that her husband's relatives, who hated her, would perjure themselves to send her to the chair, Leland writes a mysterious farewell note to Jeanette and hides with his sister in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Jeanette still has faith in him. One day a man who is evidently a detective rides up to the door of their little house in the woods. Leland tells his sister to hide while he goes out to face the man.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Earl Roeser, the new manager of the Cameraphone Theater, introduced a novel idea to the members of his club at the meeting this morning when he announced a new contest for the boy members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club. This contest is to be a search for a boy to take the part of the Cameraphone Chapter "clown."

At next Saturday's meeting all the boys who have entered this contest will be called to the stage and the one with the best "clown" costume and make-up will be judged the winner. He will take part in all ceremonies thereafter conducted on the stage.

Henry La Perche, Conny Callaro and Bob "Shorty" Segoia were the first three boys to enter their names after Manager Roeser made the announcement.

MANY IN REVUE

Many of the boys and girls who have been entertaining the members at the regular Saturday meetings of the club are entered in the "Pittsburgh On Parade" revue which will be given at the Stanley Theater the week of June 10.

One little entertainer from the Etna-Harris was surrounded by his fellow members and was overheard telling them how rehearsals for a big presentation like "Pittsburgh On Parade" are conducted.

He said:

"Gee, there's singers and dancers, comedy teams, little boys and girls, big boys and girls and most of them, until they reported for rehearsal at the Harris Theater, never saw one another before. But I'll bet you, that when Miss Alton, the director, gets through showing them what and how she wants them to do their parts we'll have the best show ever put on."

One little girl was heard to ask:

"Russ, what's a comedy team?"

This little fellow, who in the eyes of the other members is somewhat of a hero, thought for a minute before he gave this answer.

"Well, Marjorie, I'll tell you. A comedy team is two or more people who come out on the stage and make you laugh, you know, like Amos 'n' Andy on the radio. They're a comedy team."

With this Morty Henderson called the meeting to order and the youngsters receiving the above bit of information on the show business hurried to their seats and enjoyed the sparkling performance which was arranged for their entertainment.

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, school you attend, date and year of your birth, to the Secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed you.

So many Congressmen sleep in the daytime that it has been proposed that the House convene only at night. This is impractical, however, as many Congressmen continue sleeping after dark. A solution, however, has been found by Chief Clerk McHandlebar. "Many Congressmen nod as they nap," says he. "Why not let this count as voting 'Yes?' Then, maybe, Congress could get a lot of things done without any wear and tear."

THE DIFFICULTY OF GETTING ANYWHERE

News Item—Increasing motor car accidents have influenced officials administering highway laws to propose that automobile manufacturers modify their advertising emphasis, and stress the safety of their product instead of the speed and power.

In emphasizing speed and power
And classing cars by miles per hour,
The auto salesmen, on the make,
Cause many motorists to break
Their necks—while finding out if what
Was emphasized, the car has got.
But if the model's safety they
Will stress instead the driver guy
Will never think of speed or power,
Or making many miles per hour,
He'll merely think: "They say
I'm now safe,
Let's hit a post and see just how safe"
—Baron Soll.

Park on the Job

The District Attorney's Attendance at the County Audit Hearing Is Encouraging—Brief Comment.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park and an assistant district attorney, Earl T. Adair, were in the audience at the hearing yesterday on the charges of corruption and extravagance that have developed in connection with the county audit. This furnishes assurance that if criminal acts have been committed the guilty officials are not to be allowed to get away with it."

Civil action, it is to be hoped, will be instituted to compel officials who squandered the taxpayers' money, or applied to their personal use materials and labor for which the taxpayers paid, to make restitution. Not only county officials but also the city officials who were exposed last spring ought to be made, in so far as it is possible, to give back the money of which they plundered the people.

Waste and extravagance by the city administration did not stop with the exposure last spring, if Councilman P. J. McArdle's statement concerning the repair job on the Panther Hollow Bridge in Schenley Park is correct. It is gratifying to find Council voting to visit the bridge and to inquire into the accuracy of McArdle's emphatic accusation.

Public sentiment, we believe, will uphold Gov. Pinchot in his refusal to approve charters for public utilities companies for periods of more than 50 years. Public utilities have been shown to possess the power to oppress the people through exorbitant rates. To require them to apply for renewal of their charters every 50 years will tend to make them more considerate.

In announcing his disapproval of perpetual charters Gov. Pinchot pointed out that the Borough of Kane limited the life of an electric light company's franchise to 20 years. He attributes a recent cut in electric light rates to this fact. There is no doubt that public utilities appreciate good will, especially if their lack of it may mean the loss of a valuable franchise.

The announcement of a Franklin theater that it will test the Blue Law by remaining open Sunday is impressive as an indication that the resentment against the outrageous suppression of innocent amusements on Sunday is by no means confined to the large cities. If Pennsylvania's smaller communities will join the urban centers in the fight for repeal of the Blue Law, it will be repealed at the next regular session of the legislature.

It is to be hoped that the city's financial stringency will not prevent the presentation of free Sunday movies or band concerts in the parks this summer. The movies do not have to be late releases starring the highest-priced actors. There is good entertainment in older films which probably can be obtained much more cheaply. Possibly musical entertainment can be obtained at little expense.

In one of the public parks of Lima, Peru, and possibly in other cities, also, music is furnished through loud speakers erected every here and there. The music is a radio broadcast, and is surprisingly good. We mention it here as a suggestion for inexpensive Sunday entertainment in Pittsburgh's parks. The Sunday radio programs usually are very attractive.

The investigation of atmospheric pollution by carbon monoxide, completed in the Liberty Tunnels, and nearing completion at various street intersections, as announced by Dr. C. B. Mairs, director of public health, is of more than merely academic interest. There have been several cases of illness that have been attributed to carbon monoxide in the air of downtown streets.

County Controller Woodside states that it is im- possible to make annual audits of the accounts of the justices of the peace because he does not have sufficient help. He says that he will have an audit made promptly whenever there is a suspicion of irregularity. That is all right so far as it goes, but there should be regular audits of every squire's books, and if Woodside does not have enough accountants they should be provided.

It is announced that the new Lock No. 4 in the Monongahela, a $2,000,000 job, will be completed August 30, two months ahead of the scheduled time. The War Department is doing good work in improving the local rivers. The rivers will not be fully prepared for all sorts of conditions, however, until the proposed storage reservoirs have been constructed at the headwaters.

The movement started by John M. Phillips, for- mer chairman of the State Board of Game Commissioners, to have the state turn over suitable public lands, not used for other purposes, to destitute people for cultivation, has much to commend it. It is to be feared, however, that little of the forest land is fit for anything else but growing trees.

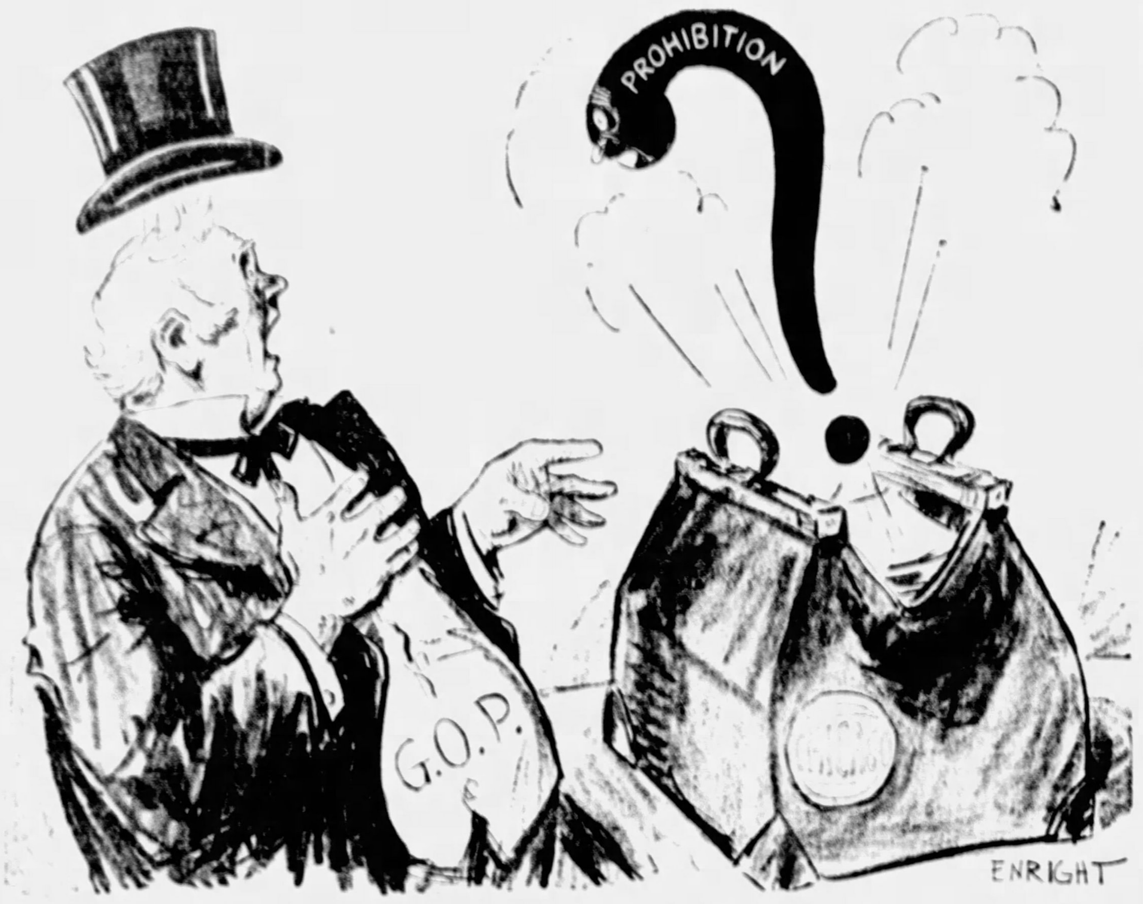
The Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, like all the welfare institutions, is hard pressed for funds because of the extraordinary demands now being made on its bounty. The association has been engaged in philanthropic work in Pittsburgh for 56 years and has done an immense amount of good. Its record entitles it to the support of the public.

Motorists who have not yet seen the new Westing- house Memorial Bridge, which spans the Turtle Creek Valley and is one of the outstanding recent improvements of the Lincoln Highway, will appreciate the large photograph of it which will appear tomorrow in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. There is a variety of other interesting pictures in the section, too.

The American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will contain, among other articles, one dealing with the affairs of Caruso's widow, the former Dorothy Park Benjamin, who was once reported engaged to the late Alexander P. Moore, the Pittsburgh publisher, and was one of the beneficiaries of Mr. Moore's will.

The Sun-Telegraph will start a new movie lovers' contest Monday. There will be $2,500 in prizes. An opportunity to "beat the depression!" And pleasure in the attempt! Another important Sun-Telegraph feature which starts Monday is a daily article by Josephine Culbertson on contract bridge. A new serial, "Skyscraper," by Faith Baldwin, starts Wednesday.

The First Out of the Bag



The hour of tribulation approaches for the politicians who have ducked, dodged, sidestepped and pussyfooted on the Dry issue for a number of years.

The signs multiply and grow plainer that this year the people will demand that all parties and all candidates take a decided stand on Prohibition.

Throughout the land there is an overwhelming preponderance of wet sentiment, reflected unmistakably every time the voters have had a chance to register their will at the polls.

Government Control Of Liquor Succeeds Throughout Dominion

By M. GRATTEN O'LEARY

Noted Canadian Journalist

(This is the third and concluding article of the series by this trained observer on the workings of government control of liquor in the Dominion. In the preceding articles, Mr. O'Leary pointed out from official government reports how revenue obtained from government liquor control reduced taxes, avoided deficits, financed unemployment relief and public improvements.)

OTTAWA, Can.—During the past five years Canada's liquor control system put $152,000,000 into the coffers of its provinces, $252,000,000 into the treasury of the Dominion.

These large sums have been used to finance social and progressive legislation, to avoid debts and deficits, to keep down the general tax scale, to take care of unemployment relief. Profits that once went to private liquor interests and to bootleggers are now going to the public and Canadians are drinking less liquor.

BEFORE the war, a Canadian population of less than nine millions consumed 5,000,000 gallons of hard liquor per year. In 1931, with the population grown to more than ten millions, the consumption of hard liquor was but 2,414,673 gallons.

Under government control of liquor sales, the peak of consumption was in 1929, when it reached 3,130,000 gallons. Since then consumption has declined steadily. Thus in 1931 sales by the Ontario liquor commission declined by more than 2,000,000 bottles.

In 1914, Canadians drank 7.5 gallons of beer per capita. In 1931 they drank but 5.9 gallons.

But while the Canadian people are drinking less of Scotch and rye, and gin and brandy, they are learning to drink wines. In 1914 wine consumption was a trifle less than one pint per head. In 1931 it was two quarts per head.

With the decline in consumption of hard liquor, there has been a corresponding decrease in drunkenness. In 1931 alone total convictions for drunkenness fell off by more than 3,000, and so did convictions for violation of the liquor acts. At the same time convictions for driving while drunk declined from 2,106 to 1,799. Finally deaths attributable to alcoholism are becoming fewer, being lower in 1931 than in any of the five preceding years.

THE LIQUOR commissions of the various provinces are not in the business of selling liquor, but in the business of CONTROLLING the sale of liquor. Liquor is not sold to the unemployed, or to men or women receiving relief or whose families might be in straitened circumstances.

Whether government control be regarded from a financial, or a social or moral standpoint, it is found to be a reasonable success, vast advance upon the old saloon, and upon prohibition as well. The liquor question is no longer in Canadian politics.

So far as the present generation is concerned government control is in Canada to stay.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 4.—Another vow broken. And here I am again week-ending in the country. They call it "The Mansions." Why the plural? We had more comfortable homes on Back street. But I must work into a conniption over this one. They'll be calling me soon to look at the views.

Ah, books on the night table! As I thought. Look. "A History of Andirons," "The Art of Clipping Privet Hedge" and "Twenty Years of Weather Tabulations." I have a pulse pumper for the collection. I must send it when I return to town—Labradorian Forest Facts."

Pretty soon the crickets will begin and touch me off with the ipus-ipuses. But one croak of a bull frog will be the overt act and I light a shuck for No. 290. They couldn't have an upstanding, God-fearing tree outside my window. No such a break!

They must have weeping willows. All drooping like Camille in the last act. I suppose there's a red robin hiding somewhere and readying up his act for daybreak. Song writers with those bob-bob-bobbin along lyrics have made a silly of the robin.

He has to be out on the lawn every morning flirting his tail and hopping stiff legged, the crazy. I'll take a road runner every time. They know how to keep quiet. A knock at the door. It's Frozen Pan, the butler. "Can I be of service, sir?" I know you, you wall-eyed old snooper.

He wants to unpack my overnight bag and discuss whatyoucallems below stairs. Well, let me tip you off to this, Moose Face. I didn't have that hole in my sock until they walked me all over this Hell's Half Acre. I've other sox at home—three pairs, smarty.

Will I be wanting a tub now or a little later? I'll have a bath when I get good and darn ready. And I wish you'd get out of here. You make me fidgety. And don't look askance at that pair of gloves with half fingers. I know it's comic, but I've worn them at night for years.

I'll bet if the truth were known you wear flannel gowns and a ruffled night cap. But you never let anyone see your wardrobe. Anything else you can do for me? So far as I can see you haven't done a thing except make me jittery. So long. I'll be seeing you again. I'm afraid. Don't be careful about the steps.

* * *

As usual, the first down stairs. As I get this layout they have merely collected a lot of second-hand stone carvings, gargoyles, balconies and such and duded-up an old barn. "The Mansions!" I wouldn't trade Grandpa Young's gourd dipper for all this junk—with Aunt Effie's tippet tossed in.

* * *

Here comes the hostess. I must give her the grease. Certainly a duck of a place. Who did your interiors—Urban? I love your fireplace. Must be early Italian. Of Caen stone? (That's knocking Madam for a field of asparagus!) Some day I'd love to send you a 17th Century urn. It's nothing. I merely admired it one time and Mussolini gave it to me. Know Benito? Mercy me! In the name of Naples, Piccola, borgeshia and a globule of spumoni.

Lovely of you to ask me. Such a relief from stuffy Manhattan and talk of the depression. Am I riding in the morning? No, thanks. I neglected to bring my togs. But I'll join everybody at the hunt breakfast. (Count on that!) O, do please hurry to your other guests. Don't mind me! She'll find out how I make out at such affairs. In a little while I'll be off in a corner feeling sorry for myself. (How classy this piece gets as it goes along!)

* * *

Thank goodness, I slid out of bridge and highball drinking. When they get stinko I can sneak to bed. I suppose Old Caribou had a sly chuckle laying out my pajamas. If I like red with green polka dots that's my business. I'm wearing them. Of course, this night table light has to be unscrewed before it will go out and I'll get a shock to remember it by.

* * *

Bet they had heaps of fun in Rockport, Maine, turning out this mattress. Anyway, it's a little better than riding the rods. There's a whippoorwill loose in this room. No, just one of those elegant big plush bugs. The Mansions! The Bug House.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

We should bring clean souls to marriage—

Should we bring clean bodies?

Should we bring sound minds?

Such simple questions. Such reasonable demands. You might not think they would cause trouble. Yet for the last 50 years, they have been raising riots.

For over 50 years, serious citizens have been trying to introduce eugenic laws in this country. Eugenic laws are not birth control laws. They are marriage control laws. They would require physical examinations of both parties before issuing a license and would prohibit marriage in the cases of mental unfitness or communicable diseases.

As to birth control, there may be different spiritual opinions. But why should there be differing opinions on the decent control of marriage?

No priest or pastor would knowingly consecrate a union of degenerate spirits. Yet, under the laws of most of our states, a union of deranged minds or diseased bodies is not only permissable but is indissoluble. And any attempt to enforce physical or mental examination before marriage, is denounced as "violating human rights" and "desecrating the sanctity of the home."

What greater violation of human rights could there be than to allow a sane mind to be ignorantly trapped in wedlock with an insane mind . . . or clean flesh to be legally contaminated by unclean?

What fouler desecration of the sanctity of the home could happen than to turn it into a hell where doomed brains and bodies agonize through life-long torture?

And what more fiendish crime could be committed against the future generations than to permit them to be born with such an awful heritage?

Yet every day, in every state in America, this tragedy is happening. In a few states the sterilization of the insane is permitted . . . though rarely practiced. In a few, annulment of marriage on the grounds of social disease, is legal. But in the great majority of our states, the marriage of the insane and the diseased, is legal and indissoluble. And, invariably, the defense used is that of religion.

Such grounds of defense are neither fair nor true. All religions strive to keep marriage pure. No religion, even that of the most conservative church, indorses any practice which will make normal family life impossible . . . or work abominations in the name of love.

The state of California is a plain example of this fact. In this state, the Catholic Church permits annulment of marriage on more grounds than the state laws recognize in granting divorce. One of these grounds is venereal disease. The church holds that under such a condition healthy family life cannot continue and dissolves any marriage where such a condition exists at time of wedlock. But the courts of California will not grant divorce for such a cause.

The question of birth control after marriage remains, and should always remain, a matter for the individual conscience and intelligence to decide. But should ignorant and innocent young people be allowed to enter into marriage without any preliminary protection of the state?

The state takes a stand against marriage by fraud. The state awards judgments in breach-of-promise suits. Is not the wrecking of clean bodies and sound brains a fraud? Is that not a breach of every sacred and civic contract?

Think about these things. Pray about them. Daily the toll of insanity and disease mounts in America. With each hour, more children are born idiotic, deformed, with flesh already rotting—BORN INTO HOPELESS MISERY BY THE SINS OF THEIR PARENTS AND THE INDIFFERENCE AND STUPIDITY OF THE VOTERS.

YOU ARE A VOTER. SO AM I. HOW LONG SHALL WE LET THIS THING CONTINUE?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Never Forget!

Never forget that life can be
A joyous and lovely thing.
Free as the winds of heaven are free
And blithe as the birds in spring.

Yours is the treasure and yours the trust
To make of it what you will.
Heart that is pure and mind that is just Give you lodging in Eden still.

Never forget that the past is gone
And the future is yet to be.
No light save that of this morning's dawn
Is shining for you and me.

Give of your best to the work you do,
Though lofty or low your task;
Steadfast your aim and your purpose true.
What more could the Maker ask?

Never forget that the brave heart spurns
A lie in a word or deed;
Never forget that the wise heart turns
To God with its every need.

FEVER OF JEALOUSY

By Winifred Black

Dead—the pretty young girl and the rather goodish-looking man of nearly 40—dead, and lying under the great tree by the clear running brook, where they used to meet in the starlight and the moonlight.

Murdered—the two of them—and the lips of the girl sealed with adhesive tape.

Jealousy, of course. The adhesive tape is the clue to that. The poor, insane fool who did the killing couldn't help leaving a perfectly clear trace of identity.

Who was it, do you suppose, who did this dreadful thing—a man, or a woman?

Was it some man, driven insane by the sudden discovery that a girl he loved and honored was false, and shallow and fickle, and common, to the very core of her silly heart?

Or did some woman go mad with crazy love for a worthless man, and put her own life in jeopardy—for what?

What could she gain by such a frantic crime?

When did she commit it, do you think?

I'll tell you when she killed those two people. She killed them the first time she allowed herself to think of them, together, and brooded over the joy it would be to wipe them off the face of the earth.

A great physician told me once that people who have delusions, and surprise their friends with sudden revelations of hideous thoughts and horrifying words, have not changed since they went insane.

They've been like that ever since, only now the jailer that locked their hideous thoughts behind the bars of self-restraint is asleep, and the thoughts unlock the door of their selves and escape to horrify the world.

The thought of murder is close to murder itself.

These things do not spring up in an instant. They are held, and cherished, and nurtured in a too willing mind. That's my belief.

And how strange it is that the people who are murdered in these frightful crimes are never worth even a paper of blunt pins!

"Whenever I see two or three nice-looking women coming into the reception room of the prison all at once," said the warden of a great penitentiary to me the other day, "I know we have a new prisoner, and I look for the most utterly worthless, no account, good-for-nothing in the place, and I always see him coming down the corridor to meet his visitors.

"But some poor, half decent fellow will stay in prison for years, and never will a single person come to comfort him with friendly sympathy.

What's it all about, anyhow—this raging fever of jealousy?

Nothing, and less than nothing. The man who makes you jealous is not worth even one instant of tormenting doubt. If he was, he wouldn't make you jealous.

I saw a cook fussing over a pot of soup the other day. He threw in a green herb, added a little paprika, then a trifle of plain pepper, then another spoonful of this, that or the other.

"It's burnt," said the cook. "I'm trying to disguise the flavor."

But under all the thyme, and all the paprika you could taste the scorched vegetables.

Whenever I see a woman trying to convince herself that a good-for-nothing is worth her jealousy, I think of that cook and his pot of scorched soup.

I don't know why; do you?

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

Do you know:

1. Who was Don Quixote's lady-love?
2. Who wrote "Frankenstein?"
3. What does the name Genoa literally mean?
4. What does "hare-brained" mean?
5. According to tradition, what happened to the Bishop of Hatto?
6. In whose house did Judas conclude his bargain to betray Jesus?
7. Who was called the "divine painter?
8. In what book is the character "Sarah Gamp?"
9. Who is the patron saint of missionaries?
10. Who killed Hamlet?

11. Dream	partial.
12. Total	expense.
13. Revenue	minute.
14. Fealty	reality.
15. Prodigious	disloyalty.

1. Dulcinea. 2. Mrs. Shelley. 3. The knee (referring to its location in Italy). 4. Mad as a March hare, giddy. 5. Eaten by mice. 6. Caiaphas. 7. Raphael. 8. "Martin Chuzzelwit," Dickens. 9. St. John the Baptist. 10. Laertes. 11. Reality. 12. Partial. 13. Expense. 14. Disloyalty. 15. Minute.
